TEXT AND TYPOGRAPHY
The American Art Association, although it has moved its American Art Gal-eries to the art center of New York and therefore of the New World, still carries great traditions which it gained from the Mary J. Morgan, A. T. Stewart,

George I. Seney, Henry G. Marquand, Joseph Jefferson, Brayton Ives, James

A. Garland, W. H. Stewart, Mrs. Susan D. Warren, Heber R. Bishop, Henry

Graves, F. O. Mathiessen, Thomas E. Waggaman, Charles T. Yerkes, Robert

Hoe, M. D. C. Borden, Catholina Lambert, George A. Hearn and countless other notable sales held at the old Galleries on Madison Square South.

The conspicuous success that characterized those dispersals of artistic properties has left its mark on the history of art collecting in this country, and fostered the formation of private collections and nascent Art Museums. Such activities did, no doubt, in time in some degree determine the late Mr. William Salomon to enter the field as a collector himself. Mr. Salomon (1852-1919), having founded an International Banking House and interested himself in the problems of transportation and world-wide finance, would naturally search far afield when selecting paintings and works of art that appealed to his taste and fine judgment. Being acustomed to accept the services of others, he sought and received the advice of Henry

Duveen and Sir Joseph Duveen; of Jacques Seligmann, of Rene Gimpel and others of eminence; and his collections reflect their unusual ability to procure the rare and authentic. He may be said to have built de fundamento ad summamatem, for he built his residence at 1020 Fifth Avenue, that it should prove a worthy casket to contain his treasures, and to hold its own among the best of its serious rivals and enriched neighbors. That Mr. Salomon, who was the founder of the Educational Alliance, acquitted himself of his self-appointed task with conspicuous success is abundantly proved by the enumeration of his works of art in this Catalogue. Yet the array before us does not in any way exhaust the full measure of his attainments as a collector. In point of fact, he laid his ground truly by purchasing at the outset in Europe and incorporating in his home, Marbles, Staircases and Structural Equipments which illustrate the discriminating judgment of a connoisseur.

NOTICE

REGARDING INSPECTION OF THE MANSION

The Salomon Mansion at 1020 Fifth Avenue, the full description of which here follows, may be inspected by those contemplating its purchase on the presentation at the house on Monday or Tuesday, March 19th or 20th, 1923, from 9 A. M. until 4 P. M. of a card of admission which can be obtained only on written application to The American Art Association, Managers. The Mansion, if not disposed of privately previous thereto, will be offered at public sale at The American Art Galleries on Saturday afternoon, April 7th, 1923, at the conclusion of the sale of the rare and costly contents.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF SALE

Sixty per cent. of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage for a term of years at five per cent. (5%).

At the time of sale the purchaser is to sign a memorandum of his purchase and pay a deposit of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000), either in cash or by certified check, to the order of the American Art Association, Managers.

For a period not exceeding thirty (30) days after the sale, the vendors shall have the sole right to the possession, occupancy and use of the premises. At the expiration of this period the deed will be delivered and possession of the premises given to the purchaser, who at the same time will pay the balance (forty per cent.) of the purchase money, less the amount of the deposit of twenty-five thousand dollars.
THE MANSION
No. 1020 FIFTH AVENUE
Northeast Corner of 83rd Street
THE EXTERIOR

The splendid Mansion, No. 1020 Fifth Avenue, at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eighty-third Street, was built by Mr. and Mrs. William Salomon for their own occupancy. Trowbridge & Livingston were the architects.

It is a stately building, occupying the whole of the site, 68 feet by 100, on which it has been erected. The quiet and sober exterior in brown stone does not suggest the palatial richness of the interior; it offers, nevertheless, two strong façades, one on each street, which are entirely satisfactory, with large windows in monumental frames, and bay windows on both fronts. One of these, on Eighty-third Street, is of bronze, and forms the street end of the Palm Room.

The Mansion is four stories in height, with a basement that opens into a spacious arcway, enclosed within a high iron fence, supported by brown-stone piers. The fourth story is entirely hidden from the street by the balustrade carried all around the building above the third floor.

The entrance is at the extreme left of the Fifth Avenue front, thus giving the maximum amount of space for the large rooms of the interior. It is approached by a short flight of brown-stone steps, and is framed in Griotte marble, the single stone of color in the exterior, and is surmounted by a marquise.

THE FIRST FLOOR

THE ENTRANCE AND VESTIBULE

The massive entrance doors are of rosewood, decorated with molded panels, the centermost of which has a large bronze lion-head carrying a ring. The storm doors have iron frames encasing sheets of plate glass. The Griotte marble frame of the exterior of the door is continued on the inner surface, where it is developed into an ornamental pediment.

Just within rise the steps, of Istrian marble, that reach the level of the main floor. The walls are entirely faced with light green marble, treated with molded panels at the steps. The single ornaments are the side lights, bronze cupids, two on each side. The ceiling is arched and paneled, with gilded frames in reliefs of scrolls and ornaments; the paneled centers are painted with grotesque heads and floral emblems on blue grounds. At the top of the steps is the inner door, a high round arch enclosing magnificent panels of wrought iron, lined with plate glass.

The rich materials of the entrance at once disclose the fact that the interior of the Mansion is quite different from the exterior. One does not need to advance farther than just within the entrance door, to realize that here is a building warranting serious consideration as a work of art.

The Vestibule is not large, but is of quite sufficient size to fill its purpose. It is square in plan, and is wholly lined with marble. The walls are of white marble, with arches supported by columns of green and white polished marble with Ionic capitals, set in the four corners. The segments of the arches enclose circles of green marble, and the spandrels are decorated with applied shells and triangular ornaments in blue and gold. The ceiling is a dome, the lower part of which has two rows of caissons with small decorative figures, with triangles and squares filling in the blank spaces. Above is a band of figures, heads and grotesques. The prevailing coloring of this decoration is blue and gold in soft tones.

On the left side, as one enters, is a built-in marble shelf, decorated below with cherub heads. Immediately in face is a wrought-iron door, opening into a passage where is the elevator, and connecting with the service departments in the basement, and with the pantry adjoining the Dining Room in the rear. Here, also, are the service stairs, running from the top to the bottom of the Mansion.

To the right is a square-headed doorway opening into the Central Hall. The piers on either side have inset marble panels of grotesques and flowers, enframed within narrow mosaic borders.

THE CENTRAL HALL

The Central Hall is a magnificent apartment, occupying the middle of the Mansion. It rises to the roof, extending through the two chief floors, and is surmounted by a glazed dome. It is entirely lined with white marble. The floors are of marble with paneled borders.

The grand staircase rises in the center of the innermost wall. It is a monumental structure, with wide steps rising to the first landing, where it turns to the left, and reaches the second floor just above the entrance from the Vestibule. It is contained within a marble balustrade that is continued around the opening at the second floor. Each newel, at the base, is surmounted by a marble cherub, lovely and gracious figures of a most appealing beauty.

While the staircase is the chief architectural contents of the Hall, it by no means furnishes the principal decorative features. These are supplied by the marbles with which the walls are decorated, and which constitute a group of most unusual interest. They were originally in a villa at Bagheria, not far from Palermo. Although late in date, they constitute one of the most important ensembles of Late Renaissance sculptures in America. Originally they formed part of an external stairway; here, of course, they have been transposed and adjusted to the spaces available for them, and as best adapted to the decoration of this sumptuous apartment.

And their utilization has been exceedingly clever. While at first glance they may seem somewhat irregularly disposed, and that some panels stand quite alone, this is actually not so; their disposition is entirely orderly and symmetrical, although the points of symmetry may seem somewhat distant. There are friezes applied to the longer walls; panels over the doorways; upright panels beside the principal openings; panels on the stair walls; and two lovely caryatids supporting the ceiling. All the panels have mosaic backings, more or less in evidence, and quite necessary in order that the sculptures be adapted to their present locations. The soft reds and blacks of these mosaics are of such tones that, from the base of the stairs, the panels on the stair walls seem of pierced marble; only close at hand does one realize that these are large slabs to which the sculptures have been applied.

There are four main doorways opening from the Central Hall: from the Vestibule, to the Grand Salon, to the Small Salon and to the Palm Room. Each is surmounted by a decorative panel whose chief motif is a pair of cherubs supporting a disk of red marble. By the entrance doorway, the doorway to the Grand Salon and by that to the Small Salon are long panels with decorations of cherub heads, foliage, scrolls and grotesques. The wide frieze along the wall of the Grand Salon has pairs of cherubs supporting cartouches with heraldic emblems. The frieze along the wall of the Small Salon is similar, save that the cartouches carry floral designs.

The panels on the stair walls are quite different. These are applied to the main wall as one ascends, and continued on the right. They are five in all. The first two are the largest, and show vases developing into foliage, with dolphins, fronted birds, hanging fruits and foliage, with a bird on a nest at the top of the first panel, while a seated lamb completes the decoration of the second panel. The third and fourth panels are somewhat smaller, and show cartouches with cupid heads at the top. The final panel is triangular in shape, with an angel in high relief, holding a trumpet in one hand and a crown in the other. All the panels are set in carved and molded frames.
Like the first floor, the second floor of the Central Hall is paved with white marble, with borders of red and green. The doorways to the various rooms have marble frames. Over three of them are oval panels decorated with paintings and upheld by scrollwork. The exceedingly sumptuous effect of this upper hall is chiefly due to the ceiling. This is an exceedingly gorgeous composition, heavily molded, with panels in blue separated by roped bands, all richly gilded. In the four corners are circular painted panels inset in rich frames. A similar treatment of blue and gold caissons is used for the ceiling in the lower floor.

Over all is a great glazed oval dome, with a richly decorated framework.

THE GRAND SALON

The Grand Salon is a noble room, occupying the whole of the Fifth Avenue front, except the space required by the entrance and the Vestibule. The walls are entirely faced with a boisserie in white and gold, and which has been utilized in its original form. It is understood to have been originally in a house in Paris, the property of the Marquise de l'Hôpital, and was made in 1737, and is quite untouched.

The boisserie consists of wide and narrow panels, separated by slim pilasters. The wide panels enclose either double doors or mirrors; the narrow panels serve as points of separation, the pilasters give emphasis to the various parts. The whole is wonderfully harmonized and the decorative adjuncts are rich and beautiful. The ground is white; the ornamental detail everywhere is gilded.

The entrance wall contains six panels. Of these the central one is the widest and is the entrance from the Central Hall. On either side is a small panel, beyond these a wide one; then another narrow panel; and on the extreme right, a doorway. To the left of the entrance the paneling is the same as on the right; save at the extreme end, where the final panel, just beyond the doorway to the Small Salon, is slightly narrower than the other wide panels. On the Fifth Avenue side there are again six panels, the midmost and widest being the bay window. Two windows open into other panels, the remaining surface being treated as the entrance wall. Each end contains three panels. In the center, on Eighty-third Street, is a window, with a wide panel on either side; in the center of the opposite wall is the fireplace; the adjoining panels containing double doors.

At the base of the walls is a narrow band of red and white marble; it is a mere support to the wood, and is no part of the decoration. The lower part of the boisserie is finished with a series of small rectangular panels that constitute a base. The large panels have simple carved outlines and contain mirrors, some with straight tops, some arched. All the mirrors have gilded frames, decorated with twisted ropes of foliage, developed at the top into hanging festoons, and completed with ornamental headpieces with a shell center, and with flowers, arrows, garden tools and other emblems and with two birds in high relief. The narrow panels are also outlined with gilded moldings, and provided with ornaments at top and bottom; to the center of each is applied a girandole in gilded bronze.

The doors, which have the value of individual panels, are in beautiful harmony with the wall panels. Each is doubled and all are supplied with locks and fixtures in chiseled gilded bronze, exquisite details that hardly count in the whole vast space, but extremely fine and handsome. Each side of the door has three panels; below, a rectangular molded panel; then a narrow one decorated with ribbons and flowers; and above, a large panel, with a decoration of wreaths, flowers and ribbons below, and hanging flower baskets with emblems above. All this decoration is carved in the wood and gilded. Over each door is a small gilded panel with medallions in relief, encased within borders of flowers, with sprays of foliage.

The fireplace is in delightful harmony with the rest of the room. It is small and low and of white marble. At each end is a channeled column, with a rosette above. The connecting frieze is very delicately carved in arabesques, and the iron lining is in keeping with the general design. Over it is a mirror and panel of the same general design as the other mirrored panels.

Of the other decorative features of the room, mention should be made of the small pilasters that serve as points of division between the upper panels. They are narrow, and treated with bands of carved foliage, with small capitals, all gilded throughout. On the Fifth Avenue front two of the mirrors have consoles below them. They are segments of circles, carrying bands of foliage and supported by volutes; below is a curved group of lyre and foliage. The shelves are white marble. The bay window on Fifth Avenue has a roped frame with shell in the center. The recess has plain panels on each side, and the three windows have roped frames and metal mounts. The ceiling, decorated with a flower basket and scrolls, is supported by a molded frieze. The ceiling of the main room is white plaster and is without ornament. It is supported by a coved frieze and crown, which is modern and has been added to adapt the boiserie to the dimensions of the room. Nor should the splendid marquetry floor be overlooked in listing the permanent features of this very notable room.

THE SMALL SALON

The Small Salon opens from the Grand Salon, and extends along the Eighty-third Street front of the Mansion. Here, again, is a fine old French wainscoting applied in its original form. The main divisions of the walls are marked off with pilasters without capitals, and are decorated with bands of narrow moldings. There are small plain panels below, and larger decorated ones above. These have molded outlines, with groups of ornament at the base, and, above, hanging festoons with flower baskets and festoons. All these decorations are carved in shallow recesses cut in the main surface of the panels.

The chimney breast is in the center of the street side, and projects slightly into the room. It contains a fireplace of gray marble with bronze mounts. At each end is a small column, over which is a bronze rosette. Bronze ornaments are applied to the frieze and the lower spandrels. There is a hearth of the same marble and an iron lining.

Above is a large mirror, with a high-arched top. It is set in a frame of pilasters with delicate branches of foliage, and a caissoned arch, over which hang festoons of foliage. There is a similar mirror, framed in the same way, on the opposite wall, and one on each side of the doorway from the Grand Salon.
There are three doorways to this room: one from the Grand Salon, one from the Central Hall, and one leading to the Palm Room, which is farther on. Over each of these is a relief of cupids, which are a part of the series used in the Central Hall.

THE PALM ROOM

The Palm Room is beyond the Small Salon, with which it is connected by a deep recess, closed by a double doorway of plate glass in a frame of molded gilded wood. The walls and floor are entirely lined with white statuary marble. The floor has a double border of dark and light green marble. The walls have a plain paneled dado, above which are panels of light green marble, inset in white. The special decorative feature of the room, however, lies in its splendid collection of columns of colored marble of Italian origin.

On the Eighty-third Street end is a rounded bay window with semi-dome, the framework of which is wholly of bronze. At each side of the opening is a high column of polished marble, each different in color, and both with Corinthian capitals. Eight shorter columns, again different in color, support the marble cornice of the wall paneling. And at the end, opposite the bay window, is a shallow niche, with a marble seat, above which are eight more columns applied to a mosaic background decorated with candelabra and foliage on a gold ground. The semi-dome of the niche is filled with a mosaic lattice pattern in green and gold.
An opening from the Central Hall is without doors, but is framed in white marble. On each side is a marble relief of grotesques and foliage, surrounded with a mosaic border. Directly opposite is a similar opening to the Dining Room. Here the thick separating wall again forms a kind of recess; again, on each side, is a marble relief of festoons and grotesques growing out of vases, and set in frames of carved wood. The segmental ceiling of the room is modern, and is of plaster imitating wood. It is paneled with molded borders separated by garlands.

ITALIAN LAVABO IN PALM ROOM

The general treatment of this room, and especially the fine utilization of the extraordinary collection of old Italian marble columns employed in its decoration, would alone make it remarkable. But it contains another notable permanent fixture in the fine Italian Lavabo, affixed to the center of its longest wall. This beautiful piece was taken from an old palace in Venice. It is beautiful alike in general design and in the exquisite patina that age has given its marble. It consists of two basins crowned with an arch, and thus presents four parts.
The lower basin is supported by two birds, one at each end, and is faced with a rather narrow cornice, richly carved. The piers carrying the second basin are decorated with cupids in relief. The frieze at this section is carved with foliage in low relief and with three winged cherub heads. The top cornice, again richly decorated, is supported by griffons. The crowning arch has a decorated border, within which are foliated panels. The whole piece is in fine preservation, and is perhaps today more beautiful than when first set up, owing to the softening effect of time and usage.

THE DINING ROOM

The Dining Room runs across the rear of the Mansion, and is lighted by windows at both ends. The entrance from the Palm Room is through a wide double doorway. The doors are of plate glass in gilded frames, covered with a lattice-work of wood with small rosettes, all gilded. The interior door frame is a magnificent old Italian piece. It is encased within two great columns of wood, painted old-blue and superbly decorated with foliage and cupids in relief, gilded. The Corinthian capitals carry a rich entablature, wide-spreading at the top, with a frieze with three panels, the midmost of which carries the inscription:

TOTA PVLORA
ES AMICA MEA
ET MACYLA NON EST
IN TE
The sumptuous coloring of this monumental frame, old-blue and gold, gives the keynote to the whole room. Its exceedingly elaborate decoration, as well as its coloring, is repeated in the ceiling.

At the Eighty-third Street end is a bay window with three sides. On each side of the opening is a splendid colossal column of Brêche Violette marble, of Italian origin, and dating probably from the seventeenth century. Of the many rich marble columns in the Mansion, these are unquestionably the choicest, for this splendid marble is seldom available for columns of this size. That they have gilded bases and carry gilded Ionic capitals are mere details; their superb surfaces and great size make them among the most notable marbles in America.

The walls have a walnut dado, to which are attached three consoles of Siena marble with bracket supports picked out in gold. The hardwood floor is a magnificent piece of wood mosaic, and has a border of Siena and Numidian marble. The bay window is entirely floored with marble, and a narrow band of Siena marble supports the walnut dado.

Immediately opposite the entrance doorway is the chimneypiece. It is an elaborate structure, the end piers of which are supported by small coupled columns of red marble, whose capitals, with curved heads on the corners, support brackets with acanthus leaves. A rather narrow cornice, with foliage in low relief, supports the main frieze of dancing angels. These form a continuous joyous band running behind small columns of red marble carrying the crowning cornice, which is carved with foliage, and has a grotesque head in the center of each projected end. Above is an inclined truncated top panel, with flying angels carrying a heraldic insignia within a wreath. And at each end is a free standing child angel embracing a candelabra.

There are two windows at the inner end of the room, and between them is an open cabinet, which was originally a window frame in an old Venetian palace. It now stands on a base of Siena marble, and consists of two slender pilasters supporting the crowning frieze, and enclosing two stories of small columns, with a separating band of ornament. The entire surface is carved throughout, the end pilasters being decorated with panels, and the inner columns covered with foliage and vines. The colors are blue and gold, corresponding to the prevailing colors of the room.

THE SECOND FLOOR

THE MASTER'S SUITE

The Master's Suite occupies the Fifth Avenue front of the second floor, and consists of a large bedroom on the corner, boudoir and bath, with an additional bath and bedroom on Eighty-third Street.

The main bedroom has a boiserie taken from the château of the Comte d'Auri- tum, at Autun, in Burgundy. The walls are treated in large rectangular panels with molded frames, with carved festoons in the upper part. There are small panels below and above, and the walls are finished with a frieze and cornice. At one end a mirror is applied to the panel and the fireplace is built in the southwest corner. The fireplace is of white marble, with a beaded frieze carrying a head in an octagon in the center, supported by columns of white and green marble. Above is a mirror in an arched frame.
The doors form the most notable part of the boiseries. They are double, each with three sets of panels; the lower contain large ovals; the small intermediate panels are carved with delicate foliage; and the large upper panels are richly carved with flowers and foliage in high relief, very beautifully done. The metal mounts are of chiseled bronze, gilded. Above the doors are semicircular panels, decorated with figures in gray and white.

The Boudoir, which adjoins this room on Fifth Avenue, has a large round-arched window. It is paneled in wood, with large panels with a lattice decoration in their upper parts. One wall is filled with closets, decorated in the same way, but with mirrored fronts. The ceiling has a deep cove, ornamented in gold.

The Bath Room attached to this suite is the most notable of the many such rooms in the Mansion. It is lined throughout with marble, the walls having pilasters with Ionic capitals, between which large panels of onyx have been inserted. It is divided into two parts by a marble railing. The inner part is lower than the outer, and is reached by a short flight of semicircular steps. The bath tub and shower are in the lower section. The ceiling is a half circle treated as a dome in its decoration of mosaic, in soft grays and blues, ornamented with trellises and grapes. The room is lighted by a large round-arched window on the Avenue, and the entrance door is surmounted by a mosaic decoration with center circle.
MAIN BEDROOM, SECOND FLOOR, FACING FIFTH AVENUE
At the other end of the Suite, opening onto Eighty-third Street, is a second bath room, connecting with another bedroom. The doors and mantel are of the same beautiful character as those in the main bedroom.

THE INNER HALL

The main stairway in the Central Hall rises only to the level of the second story. A subsidiary hall extends from the Central Hall to the Library at the rear, and contains the stairs leading to the third floor. It is paneled throughout in oak, in narrow molded panels, surmounted by a broad frieze. The ceiling is white, with exposed beams.

The stairs rise to the left, enclosed within handrails of pierced oak in a complicated pattern of circles and foliage. This handrail is on both sides of the lower flight of steps; in the upper section, which adjoins the wall, it is on the outer margin only.
UPPER PORTION OF STAIR WELL, THIRD FLOOR

The upper portion of the stair well is one of the most charming parts of the house. Like the lower hall, it is paneled in oak; but here the paneling is in long upright sections alternating with painted panels of the school of Fragonard, which were taken out of a château near Vienna, in Austria. There are seven of these panels, delightful pieces, very fresh in color, and very characteristic of their period. The paneled ceiling has a ceiling light, filled with soft yellow glass.

THE SECRETARY'S ROOM

On the right of the Inner Hall is a door in old oak, decorated with cherubs' heads, horns of plenty, and flowers. It opens on to the Secretary's Room, a small apartment, richly paneled in old oak. The walls have superb panels of richly carved oak, in exceedingly intricate design, inserted in them, notable pieces meriting the most attentive study. The frieze is formed of smaller panels decorated with symmetrical patterns. The doors are enclosed within channeled pilasters, standing on high molded bases, and a small head is at each end of the surmounting frieze.
The fireplace is set diagonally across one corner. Faced with pink Numidian marble, the opening is surmounted with a frieze of grotesque heads between molded panels. The overmantel has three panels carved in low relief, and the crowning cornice is supported by richly ornamented pilasters ending in heads. An outer scroll decoration completes this interesting piece.

The geometrical ceiling of the room is treated with decorated panels.

The Library is at the extreme end of the inner hall, and occupies the space immediately above the Dining Room. It is hence an apartment of noble dimensions, and its permanent fixtures contain a number of notable pieces.

The entrance doors have plainly molded panels on the hall side; but within they offer four large panels delicately carved in low relief with intricate designs. They form the central feature of an elaborate composition, all in oak. On each side is a column whose entire surface is carved with foliage, and which stand on plainly molded pedestals. Above is a triangular balcony, supported on carved brackets, and having a pierced balustrade, with panels enclosing angels supporting a cartouche, with foliage and spirals.
THE LIBRARY
Further on, symmetrically placed with regard to the entrance doorway, are two superb old oak double doors, one on each side of the center. The frames have decorated moldings, but the doors themselves are extremely rich and beautiful. Each half has five panels, three narrow ones with flat cartouche-like decorations, and two rectangular upright panels, containing smaller oval panels, all exquisitely carved, and constituting works of art of the highest order. The door handles, like the handles of the entrance doors, are bronze heads, here inset in the carvings of the central narrow panels. Above the doors are paintings, inset in narrow frames.
Opposite the entrance door is the chimney piece. It is an elaborate composition in two parts, the fireplace and the overmantel, the whole richly carved in stone. The fireplace is contained within an elaborately carved frame, with outer pilasters with decorated panels, and with rich capitals, each presenting a grotesque head. The frieze depicts the story of Adam and Eve, with small figures and trees in the end pieces.
The connecting band is narrowed over the opening, and has a band of delicately carved foliage, with birds eating grapes. In the center is a bracket carrying, in the upper frieze, a delicious little angel playing a viol. This second frieze is carved with foliage, birds and cartouches, with a mask on each end. It is completed with a decorated cornice.

The overmantel is a superb composition, presenting a Roman naval engagement. Like the lower part, it is wholly in stone, the central scene being carved in high relief. On each side of the frame is a heroic figure of a nude warrior, standing behind armor and arms grouped below. A frieze of helmets and draped flags is surmounted by the final cornice.

The room is lighted by three windows at each end. Each group is in a shallow recess, with a walnut column wholly carved with foliage at each end. The columns have two drums, the lower shorter than the other, each with a pair of boldly projected angel heads. They stand on low paneled bases, and are surmounted with Corinthian capitals.

The walls are covered with red silk velvet, and are finished with a carved wood cornice, the upper member of which has molded corbels with rosettes between them. Above is a deep cove, paneled and molded with colored decorations in low relief. A heavy roped frame encloses the painted ceiling, representing the "Apothecosis of Louis Quatorze." Seated on a cloud, a figure of France approaches him with a plaque bearing the arms of France. Little angels fly around with the royal emblems; a larger angel blows a trumpet, and another empties the horn of plenty. A brilliant and vigorous composition.

The floor is a splendid specimen of inlaid marquetry with ornamental borders.

THE THIRD FLOOR

BLUE BEDROOM, THIRD FLOOR

The Third Floor contains bedrooms, arranged in suites with connecting baths. In a general way these all open on to a corridor running around the space occupied by the dome of the Central Hall. It has a round-arched ceiling, and is trimmed with walnut; the walls are red silk damask.

The most important of the bedrooms is the corner room overlooking Fifth Avenue and Eighty-third Street. It is known as the Rose Room, from the color of the furniture. It is paneled in wood painted gray, with small lower panels and upper ones in two tiers, with ornaments above and below. A shallow decorated cove supports the ceiling. The windows have segmental tops, and there is a built-in mirror between those on the Avenue. The fine old French fireplace in the corner is rose and yellow marble, molded, with a mirror above it. Over the doors and mirrors are painted panels representing the arts, taken from a dressing-room of the Comédie Française. Most of these panels are originals, but some additional ones were necessitated by the size of the present room.

The adjoining room has some similar painted panels over the doors. The woodwork is painted white, and the walls are hung with fawn silk with embroidered borders. The fireplace is white marble with caryatids.

Of the other rooms on this floor special mention should be made of the Small Library on the Eighty-third Street side. It is finished with oak, with a ceiling with exposed beams. It is entirely surrounded with open bookshelves. The doors have channeled pilasters on low bases, and the frieze is decorated with small carved heads and ebony panels. The fireplace is faced with Dutch tiles, and the overmantel has a frieze of carved wood panels.
THE BASEMENT

The Basement is reached from a Central Hall by a flight of marble steps enclosed within a passage wholly lined with marble, both walls and ceiling. At the base is a Foyer, floored with white marble, with purple and green borders. On one side is a door to a recess that leads to the service section; on each side is a marble column.

Directly in face is the door to the Billiard Room. It has an ornamental frame, whose cornice is carried on a pair of cupid caryatides supporting the frieze. The doors are plate glass. The Billiard Room is treated with walnut, with walls of red silk damask and a narrow oak cornice. The entrance doorway has fluted columns on either side, with high carved lower drums and Corinthian capitals. The bay window opening is supported by marble columns with Ionic capitals. The fireplace, of white marble, is delicately carved with a frieze of heads, garlands, griffins and festoons. The room connects with a Lavatory at a slightly lower level, wholly lined with marble.

THE SERVICE ROOMS

The Service Rooms are, for the most part, located in the basement. Here are the kitchen, laundry, linen room and trunk room. The cellar contains the furnace. The Butler's Pantry, which immediately adjoins the Dining Room on the first floor, is fitted with every possible convenience, and contains the silver vault. Cabinets for glass and other table articles are arranged in a balcony within the Pantry.
BILLIARD ROOM

The servants’ quarters are on the fourth floor, which contains fifteen bedrooms and three baths.

While the ornamental rooms of the Mansion are the parts that necessarily attract the most attention, and rightly so, for a wealth of artistic material has entered into their structure and decoration, it is a dwelling intended to be lived in, and it is equipped throughout with all the modern conveniences needed to make it habitable.

243—URBINO WARE DISH (1546): "THE TAKING OF TROY"

A large dish, with sunk center. Men on horseback and on foot, in battle array, on low-lying ground on the bank of a river; others ride down from the Castle. Buildings on the far side of the river. Inscribed: "Roma di Troia, 1546. Fatto in Venezia in Castello."

Diameter, 21 inches; in a glass case, 25 inches high.

Formerly in the Andrew Fountaine (of Narford) Collection and sold June 17, 1884, No. 208.

In the collection of Lord Amherst, of Hackney, at Didlington Hall, Norfolk, and sold at Christie's, December 11, 1908, No. 14.

Bought from Lowengard, Paris.

Reproduced in color in H. Delange: "Recueil de Faïences Italiennes," 1879, Plate 80, and referred to at page 23 in the following terms: "We must say that it is the only work that we have met with, made in Venice, in Castello."

AFTER RAPHAEL

244—SIXTEENTH CENTURY TRILOBATE URBINO CISTERN, OR BASIN: "THE GODS ON OLYMPUS"

The curved rim is decorated with repeating volutes; a grotesque Satyr head forms each of the three handles. The inside is ornamented above with "The Gods on Olympus," with Mars in the foreground of the group. In the center, at the foot of Olympus, the waters divide; on the left is Venus, nude and with a lyre, at the head of a group of her attendants; from the right issue forth other maidens who are about to disrobe and bathe. The outside of the cistern is ornamented with Italian hill-top towns in a summer landscape. The foot is formed of lions' paws. Probably a work of Orazio Fontana. On a wood rest, contained within a case.

Height, 11 inches; diameter, 16½ inches.

Sold out of the collection of Andrew Fountaine, of Narford, June 17, 1884, No. 82.
ORAZIO FONTANA
CIRCA 1545

243—Urbino Faience Vase

The neck and upper side portion of the cylindrical vase are decorated with satyrs, dolphins and other fantastic creatures, variously employed and rendered in a ribbon-like design. In a cartouche a satyr and a nymph are seated. Below the horizontal band, formed of blue and yellow cross sections, is a wide field containing strange creatures of similar hue, set in a decorative plan. In the center is a quatrefoil containing a rocky landscape with a man and, seated behind him, a woman on horseback pursued by mounted soldiers. Left and right of this central motif is a small circular medallion with figures, seen in an azure field. Below a second horizontal band in a cartel is the inscription:

"Corre Amadis tras Gasian y
le hanía hurtado una Donzetta
y si hascia defendida de otro
Canebero. LXIII."

On the reverse is, above, a medallion with the "Judgment of Paris." Beneath the upper horizontal band is a quatrefoil containing three warriors grouped in the center and two other soldiers in the left background, all seen in a hilly landscape. Below the second horizontal band is an oblong cartel inscribed:

"Despues de heridos en muchas
partes se reconocen Amadis y
Galaor. LXII."

This vase, which has a thin stem ornamented with fantastic animals, stands on a hexagonal base borne on claw feet. This base is detachable and is ornamented with egg and tongue patterns; it is set round with six framed panels of Renaissance invention, which are alternatively oval.

Height, 26½ inches.

From the collection of the late Baron Adolphe de Rothschild, Paris.

Bought from Duveen Brothers.

The subject of Amadis of Gaul, here represented, is derived from a romance of ideal chivalry which sets forth the "fairest and the best" of the heroes. This romance is the father of the innumerable lineage that sprang up in Spanish literature during the sixteenth century. It was perhaps composed in 1492-96. The first edition known was printed in 1508 and is the earliest version of the romance that has come down to us. France, Spain and Portugal have each been claimed as the cradle of this romance, the author of which was a Regidor of the most noble city of Medina del Campo.

246—LARGE URBINO BALUSTER VASE

The handles are each formed of two entwined serpents whose heads coil along the rim of the vase. Beneath each handle is a yellow winged head, and below each, again, is an oval compartment, ornamented in blue with a mythological scene. The main field is strewn with quaint mythological creatures and fantastic animals, set out in fanciful patterns. The circular medallion with a yellow ground, contained within a blue border, represents "The Building of the Tower of Babel"; such another medallion on the reverse presents to us Shepherds with their flocks and other animals, i.e. "The Scattering of the People." Beneath the yellow horizontal band above the stem are four medallions spaced between weird creatures and birds. The round foot of the vase rests on a triangular base which on one side is inscribed:

FATTE IN URBINO IN BTEGA
DI ORATIO FONTANA

ORAZIO FONTANA
Circa 1545

247—URBINO BALUSTER VASE

For the most part similar in decoration to No. 246. The circular medallion sets forth in detail "The Building of Solomon's Temple"; another scene renders, on the reverse, "The Creation of the Kingdom of Judah." Inscribed on one side of the triangular base:

FATTE IN URBINO IN BTEGA D. ORATIO FONTANA

Height, 21 inches.

From the collection of the late Adolphe de Rothschild, Paris, and the collection of M. Charles Stein.

These two vases are said to have been at one time in the famous Spitzer Collection. They are dealt with at length in the Gazette des Beaux Arts, February, 1886, page 127, and reproduced at page 414: "In spite of the chronology and classification, two masterpieces quite at the beginning attract our attention; they are large Urbino vases and a pair; we shall give an engraving out of the text, so as best to set forth their form and decorative quality, their fine drawing, harmony of colour and variety, as well as the milky quality of the white enamel which serves as a background. Moreover, these two pieces bear the inscription . . . .

Here, therefore, is an authentic work, if not of a celebrated potter, at least of his workshop, which can serve to fix attributions of pieces that may be similar or may have such decoration as we admire in the Bargello, in the Louvre or in other collections."

Height, 14 inches.
No. 286—PAIR OF ANTIQUE ITALIAN ALABASTER STATUETTES
“Satyr, Sportive Cupidon and Infant Faun.” A vine-laureated satyr, with sardonic grin on his face, is seated resting his right arm on a rustic tree-trunk, his left extended holding a tambourine of grapes on his knee; the grapes are the attraction for an active little faun that the satyr is partially restraining with his right hand, although the little rascal has reached over the satyr’s knee and almost attained his object. Cupidon is on the ground frolicking, and to divert attention has clutched the satyr’s right hoof. Pan’s pipes are on the grape-strewn rustic base. On molded round plinth. Very rich deep yellow-brown patina. Signed “Clodion” at back.

Height, 21\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches.

Note: This and the following group are slightly changed repetitions of Clodion’s well-known groups representing the same subjects in the Cluny Museum in Paris which are signed and dated 1783 and were presented in 1891 to the Cluny Museum by Léon Morcaux. They are reproduced in an article by Jules Guiffrey in the Gazette des Beaux Arts, 1893, Vol. I, pages 393 and 395; also in the book by Thirion on “Les Adam et Clodion,” 1885, pages 233 and 285.

Michel (Claude) called Clodion; Born in Nancy in 1738; died in 1814. Studied in Paris in the atelier of his uncle and later with Pigalle. In 1759 Clodion received the first prize in sculpture. Went to Rome in 1762 and stayed there until 1771, when he came back to Paris. Married in 1781 the daughter of the sculptor Augustin Pajou, and it was only in 1793 that he entered the Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture.

289—BRONZE GROUP  By Clodion (Claude Michel); French, 1738-1814

“Wood Nymph, Sportive Cupidon and Infant Faun.” The vine-laureated wood nymph is seated on rocky ground; a light drapery loosely falls over her lap; on her left knee, which is crossed over to right, she restrains a venturesome infant faun, who wants to join in play with a cupidon on the ground beneath, who laughs up at them, evidently recollecting some amusing prank he has played in the past. The expression of uncertain caution of the infant faun is inimitable. On molded round base. Rich deep yellow-brown patina. Signed “Clodion” at back.

Height, 21\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches.

Nos. 288-289—BRONZE GROUPS
"Cupidons Holding up Mirrors to Venus." Cupidon facing slightly to left, with one knee on rocky ground, holds up, on higher rock, a circular mirror for his mother, Venus, to view her charms; he has garlanded the mirror with flowers and fruit. Cupidon's chubby little sister, facing slightly to right, is seated and holding a similarly garlanded mirror in much the same way as her brother. Exceptionally fine chiseling and gilding. Fine original patina. Both figures are on incurved fluted oval statuary marble bases; enriched with husks in the flutings and leaf moldings.

Height, 10 inches.

Note: These two charming figurines were supposed to be made for and presented by an admirer to Marie Antoinette, flattering her with the assumption of her beauty rivaling that of Venus.

291—MARBLE BUST OF MME. DE WAilly, née BELLEVILLe

By Augustin Pajou

Madame de Wailly is represented facing to the front with her eyes looking toward the left. Her hair is arranged in elaborate curls falling to her shoulders and framing her beautiful face. She wears a gown loosely draped and exposing her left shoulder. On a molded round dove-gray marble base and square plinth. Signed at back, "Pajou," and dated 1789.

Height, 32½ inches.

Reproduced in the work by Henri Stein on Augustin Pajou, 1912, page 29 and page 32, pl. II, as belonging to the David Weill Collection in Paris and formerly in the Mme. Lelong and in the Princess de Wagram Collections. It was exhibited in the Salon in Paris in 1789.

Note: Madame de Wailly, née Belleville, was the wife of the famous French Architect Charles de Wailly, who was attached to the Court of the French King, and who was a personal friend of Pajou. His terra-cotta bust in the Baron de Bethman Collection in Paris was also executed by Pajou (reproduced in Stein: "Augustin Pajou," page 27). When Charles de Wailly died in 1798, Madame de Wailly married Antoine Fourcroy, member of the Academy of Science in Paris and General Director of Public Instruction.

Pajou, Augustin: Born in Paris in 1730; died in 1809. Pupil of Jean Baptiste Lemoine, whose atelier he entered when fourteen years of age. Went to Rome in 1752 and entered the Royal Academy. In 1756 he came back to Paris, where he entered the Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture.

292—LIMESTONE BUST OF MARIE ANTOINETTE

Attributed to Augustin Pajou

Marie Antoinette is represented facing to the front. Her hair is dressed high and a few curls fall to her shoulders. She wears a gown cut low and draped in front and over her shoulders. From her neck hangs a ribbon to which is attached a medallion with the image of Louis XVI. On a square molded base.

Height, 33¾ inches.

Note: Pajou executed many portraits of Marie Antoinette. Among them the most famous is the group in which the Queen is represented as Venus holding the Cupid (it represents her new-born child) in her arms and of which there is one example in the possession of Madame Francis de Croiseet in Paris and another in the Musée de Manufacture de Sévres. As for busts of her, there is one in the Palais de Trianon in Versailles and another in the Château de Versailles.

Pajou, Augustin: Born in Paris in 1730; died in 1809. Pupil of Jean Baptiste Lemoine, whose atelier he entered when fourteen years of age. Went to Rome in 1752 and entered there the Royal Academy. In 1736 he came back to Paris, where he entered the Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture.

294—MARBLE STATUETTE REPRESENTING MERCURY ATTACHING HIS HEEL WINGS

Mercury is seated on rolling cloud forms. He is represented naked, a drapery covering only a part of his loins. He wears his famous winged hat, and is attaching his heel wings to his left foot. His caduceus is seen at the left. On a round marble base.

Height, 25 inches.

Note: This statuette is a repetition of the famous statue of Mercury in marble in the Berlin Museum, executed in 1748 at the order of the French King Louis XV, who gave it as a present to the King of Prussia. A small marble statuette of this figure, executed by Pigalle in 1744 as his diploma work, is in the Louvre, together with a more than life-size repetition in lead coming from the Jardin du Luxembourg. Another replica in marble belonged formerly to the "fermier général" Bouret.
295—SCULPTURED STATUARY MARBLE GROUP  By Allegrain

"Leda and Swan." The daughter of King Theseus, lightly robed, stands with her right hand resting on a drapery, her head gracefully turned downward to the swan at her right side. Her other hand is raised in a gentle warning gesture to the swan. Finely modeled with rare feeling for flesh texture. On molded round base.

Height, 25 inches.

Allegrain, Christophe Gabriel: Born in Paris in 1710; died in 1795. Brother-in-law of the sculptor Pigalle. Was agreed in 1748 to the Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture. He was almost constantly employed by Madame du Barry in her Château in Luciennes, from which come her best known statues in the Louvre, "La Baigneuse" and "Diane surprise au bain" (Nos. 483 and 484).
296—SCULPTURED STATUARY MARBLE GROUP

By Pajou; French, 1730-1809

"Satyr and Bacchic Infant." A bearded muscular Satyr, looking slightly to right, is seated on draped uneven rocky ground spread with fruit. He dandles on his raised left knee a Bacchic infant, who joyfully plays his reeded pipes. On molded oval dove-gray plinth. Signed in front, "Pajou," and dated 1778.

Total height, 19 1/4 inches.

Note: This delightful group and the succeeding group are undoubtedly two of the most charming and playful sculptures ever produced by Pajou, who was so famous for his portrait sculpture.

297—SCULPTURED STATUARY MARBLE GROUP

By Pajou; French, 1730-1809

"Bacchic Wood Nymph and Infant." A nymph looking slightly to left, wearing knopped hair at back, is seated on rocky, uneven ground spread with fruit, amid which her tambourine is seen. She is holding and fervently kissing her little offspring, who stands against her right knee with a bunch of grapes under his left arm. (Restored.) On oval dove-gray marble plinth. Signed at back, "Pajou," and dated 1778.

Total height, 19 1/4 inches.

Note: The two groups here described are reproduced in Henri Stein: "Augustin Pajou," pages 212-213, as belonging to the collection of Edouard Kann in Paris, which were formerly in the Bischoffheim Collection, and were lent by him to the "Exposition de l'Art au 18me siècle," 1884, No. 268.

French Eighteenth Century

“Two Infant Satyrs Playing with Goat.” The goat is prancing toward right, while one vine-wreathed satyr kneels in front attempting to pull him to earth by his beard and body; the other, kneeling on the animal’s rump, is steadying himself with his hands on its shoulders. On oblong rustic base, with bunches of grapes scattered thereon. Signed on base, “Johannes Claudius De Cock inv. fec anno 1724.” (One leg of mounted satyr has been restored.)

Height, 32 inches; width, 21 inches.

Pedicest height, 42 inches; width, 255/8 inches.

Half statuary marble pedestal of later period. Oblong paneled shaft with molded crown and base enriched with leaf moldings.
299—TWO BRONZE STATUETTES

"Infants Bacchus and Venus." Young Bacchus, with vine wreath in his hair, joyously stands on a rustic base amid bunches of grapes that he is playfully spilling from his robe, held up as a festooned pannier with his two hands. The sorrowful little Venus stands holding her robe up in a similar manner and dries a tear with her left hand as she glances sidelong at her two dead love-birds in her gathered-up robe. Rich green-black patina of the period. On molded round Rouge Royale marble plinth.

Height, 20 inches.

300—BRONZE BUST

"Young Girl." Wearing vine leaves and grapes in her long waving hair, which falls past her shoulders, and robe draped low round her bosom. On round molded plinth. Pedestal for same.

Bust height, 18¾ inches.
301—CARVED BOXWOOD FIGURINE
French Eighteenth Century

Total height, 15½ inches.

302—TWO MARBLE CASSELETTES, MOUNTED IN CUIVRE DORE
Louis XVI Period

Egg-shaped smoked cream marble body, with similar dome cover. Mounted in finely chiseled cuivre doré with leaf and berry terminal, gadroon-molding to cover, incurved neck with chevroned shoulder having open scrolling below and two grotesque leonic-ass headed handles. On molded round base and square plinth adorned with gadroons and pointed leaves.

Height, 11½ inches.

303—TWO MARBLE CASSELETTES, MOUNTED IN CUIVRE DORE AS LAMPS, WITH SHADES
Louis XVI Period

Statuary marble urn-shaped bowl, with dome cover and incurved rounded triangular plinth. Mounted in cuivre doré with ram's-horned satyr-mask tripod legs tapering to hoof feet and standing on an incurved base with fruit finial. Champagne-colored silk shade.

Total height, 22½ inches.

304—TWO CUIVRE DORÉ AND MARBLE LAMPS AND SHADES
Directoire Period

Cuivre doré figure of a voluminously robed vestal, standing holding aloft a small marble vase and a surmounting gilded leaf urn and a cut-glass bowl. On stepped circular statuary marble base. capped by round fillet of red porphyry. Champagne-colored silk shades.

Total height, 27½ inches.

305—CUT-CRYSTAL GLASS FLOWER HOLDER, MOUNTED IN CUIVRE DORÉ
Louis XVI Period

Funnel-shaped bowl, cut with stripes and scalloped rim. Supported by cuivre doré tripod enriched with satyr-masks having rams' horns and hoof feet; fruit pinnacle in center, on round malachite base furnished with half statuary round marble plinth.

Height, 17 inches.
TWO BRONZE AND CUIVRE DORÉ CANDELABRA

French Eighteenth Century, Period of Louis XVI

Standing figures of Flora and Pomona in black-green bronze, having baskets of flowers at feet, and upholding cuivre doré cornucopias of flowers and fruit emitting three scrolled arms fitted for wax candles. Red porphyry plinth, enriched with gilded wreath of laurel leaves.

Height, 30 inches.

Note: Two very similar candelabra were formerly in the Eugène Kuenen Collection (reproduced in Catalogue, 1913, Vol. I, page 92, pl. 113).
TWO BRONZE FIGURINES

Directoire Period

"Two Small Psyches Dancing." Both with long curling hair, butterfly wings and ribbon sash, their arms raised in action and one foot of each lifted from the ground. Fine golden green patina of period. Supported on molded square plinths, enriched with gilded stellate motives and leaf moldings.

Total heights, 17 1/2 inches.

ORMOLU AND MARBLE CLOCK

French Eighteenth Century; by Barancourt

"Venus and Cupidon." Modeled by Falconet. Domed statuary marble body and double plinths. A lightly draped Venus gracefully leans over the dome, her right hand stretched forth to receive from her little son, Cupidon, a love-bird he is handing to her; a drapery of cuivre doré falls over the back of the body. The plinths are variously enriched with leaf moldings, trophy and festooned lion paws between the two plinths. Porcelain dial, signed "Baran-court."

Height, 14 inches.

Note: The composition is similar to the one in the clock in the Palais de l’Élysée in Paris, reproduced in Dumontier: “Les Bronzes du Mobilier National,” pl. 20, No. 1.

TWO BRONZE AND MARBLE CANDELABRA

Louis XVI Period

Cuivre doré leaf-enriched urn, surmounted by two adjustable scrolled acanthus-leaf arms for lights. Supported by three caryatids in rich brown bronze and statuary marble plinths, enriched with tasseled chain festoons on plinth.

Height, 16 inches.

TWO BRONZE AND CUivre DORE CANDELABRA

French Eighteenth Century; Period of Louis XVI

Two bronze nymphs in lightly draped robes gayly dance as they hold aloft staves, each terminating in three rams’ heads and surmounted by three lightly scrolled acanthus-leaf arms and central standard terminating in a pineapple and leaf motive, festooned with chains. On dove marble pedestal, festooned with further chains and adorned with pearl moldings and square base.

Height, 27 inches.

Note: There are similarities with candelabra formerly in the Eugène Kraemer Collection, reproduced in Catalogue, 1913, pl. 106.

Square marble body, with circular porcelain dial; surmounted by a pyramid and supported on molded plinth. Mounted in finely chiselled cuivre doré with Imperial crown resting on cushion at the top of pyramid, military trophy in front, and supported on body by leonic-headed leaf paw feet, the square body flanked by cupids, the one at left seated wearing helm and carrying a cornucopia of coronets on his knees. At right another is standing with laurel wreath over left arm; base with acanthus rinceaux and button feet. Dial inscribed: "Rogue à Paris."

Height, 20 inches.
312—CUIVRE DORE AND BRONZE CLOCK  Louis XVI Period

Spherical movement, with annular revolving porcelain hour and minute dials; surmounted by two cupids and love-birds amid cloud forms and stars. Supported on three Atlantes, central baluster coiled with serpent constituting the hand of the clock, and incurved triangular base enriched with spread eagles bearing festoons; gadrooned feet. The torsos of the Atlantes are in deep rich bronze giving a fine tone to the remaining gilding.

Height, 24 1/4 inches.
313—CUIVRE DORE CARTEL.  By Imbert; French Eighteenth Century

Molded drum dial, extending to lattice panels at sides and foot; wreathed and festooned with beautifully chiseled oak-leaf garlands bearing and tasseled with acorns. Surmounted by a large bowknotted ribbon and festooned and fluted vase. Pendent with acanthus and laurel leaved husks. Dial signed: Imbert, L'aîné.

Height, 24½ inches.

Note: The composition shows similarity with a clock in the Louvre and with another in the Ministère de la Guerre (reproduced in Dumonthier: "Les Bronzes du Mobilier National, pl. 25).

314—FOUR CUIVRE DORE CANDELABRA  Empire Period

Reeded expanding shaft, with arabesqued capital and leaf base; supporting three scrolled acanthus-leaf arms and central vase for lights.

Height, 21¾ inches.
315—CUIVRE DORÉ CARTEL

By Causard; French Eighteenth Century

Height, 22 1/2 inches.

Note: A clock mounted on an elephant and signed in exactly the same way is in the possession of Mr. James Arthur (see F. G. Britton: "Old Clocks and Their Makers," p. 438). Another clock, signed "Causard, Horloger du Roi," is in the Ministre de la Marine in Paris, reproduced in Dumonthier: "Les Bronzes du Mobilier National" (Pendules et Cartels), pl. 12, fig. 2. In the same work, pl. 25, is reproduced a clock from the Louvre showing a similar composition.
316—TWO BRONZE AND CUIVRE DORÉ CANDELABRA

_Louis XVI Period, after Clodion_

Figure of a chubby Cupidon draped about loins and finished in fine green-brown patina, standing with upraised arms carrying aloft bouquets of _cuivre doré_ lilies, of which four flowers are fitted for candles. On molded drum pedestal, enriched with spiral flutings, leaf and pearl motives and cruciform feet.

Height, 36 inches.

317—TWO BRONZE CANDELABRA

_Directoire Period_

Classic nymph in rich brown-black bronze, bearing _cuivre doré_ scrolled cornucopia of grapes from which spring three chain-festooned acanthus branches for lights and at center a coiled serpent beneath a flaming torch. On round Alps-green marble plinth, enriched with gilded acanthus-leaf moldings.

Height, 31 inches.

320—TWO BRONZE AND CUIVRE DORÉ CANDELABRA

By Feuchère; French Eighteenth Century

Gilded gadroon vase-shaped support, wreathed at neck with leaves and berries and boldly festooned with roses; leaf-enriched and fluted round base. Two green-bronze mermaids, with entwined tails, kneel on the shoulder of vase and support a bouquet of golden lilies growing from the vase and having three bobèches for lights. On square dove-gray marble plinth, enlivened with pearl moldings and round button feet. Very richly gilded. Pedestals for same.

Height of candelabra, \(44\frac{3}{4}\) inches.

Note: These two finely chiseled and modeled candelabra are stamped with the royal coronet above En and numbered 1277 and 1276. They were formerly in the Château d'En.

Two candelabra of similar shape were formerly in the Jacques Doucet Collection in Paris, reproduced in Catalogue, Vol. III, page 22, pl. 232.

Feuchère was a French metal-worker of the second half of the eighteenth century. There are several sets of wall lights and a pair of candelabra by him in the Wallace Collection in London. (See Molinier: "La Collection Wallace and Illustrated Catalogue of Sculptures . . . of the Wallace Collection," XI, 5-8, and XIX, No. 20). There are also works by him in the Louvre.

322—THREE-GRACE CUIVRE DORÉ CLOCK

By Lepaute; French Eighteenth Century

Garlanded drum movement, with porcelain dial surmounted by cupidon carrying a medallion occupied by profile head of François I. Supported on fluted and columned urn surrounded by three graceful figures of classic nymphs, garlanded with flowers. On oblong statuary marble base, enriched with laurel and vine motives and button feet. Dial signed: Lepaute, Hger. du Roi. The figures after Clodion.

Height, 22 inches.

Note: Jean André Lepaute was born at Montmédy in 1709; died in 1789. Famous in Paris as a Clockmaker. Was appointed “Horloger du Roi.” Author of an excellent “Traité d’Horlogerie,” published in 1760.

In the Jones Collection, in the South Kensington Museum in London, is a fine clock signed “Lepaute de Belle Fontaine à Paris.” Four clocks by him are in the Wallace Collection in London. In France there is a great number of them in the Palais de Fontainebleau; also in the Palais de Compiegne, in the Ministère de la Guerre, in the Ministère de la Justice and in the Palais de l’Elysée, Paris; in the Louvre, etc., all reproduced in Dumontier: “Les Bronzes du Mobilier National” (Pendules et Cartels).

As for the figures of the Graces supporting the clock, they are greatly inspired from Clodion’s famous candelabrum supported by the Three Graces in the Louvre, reproduced in Thirion: “Les Adam et Clodion,” page 322.

337—FOUR SILVER AND ROCK-CRYSTAL LUSTRED WALL APPLIQUES

Louis XVI Period

Fluted, half vase-shaped back, terminating in three leaves and emitting at crown a bouquet of cut crystal flowers with pear-shaped drops, and series of two and three upscrolled arms for lights; elaborately festooned and pendent with varied faceted and pear-shaped drops.

Height, 231/4 inches.
338—IMPORTANT LUSTRED OXIDIZED SILVER-PLATED CHANDELIER
Louis XVI Period

At crown a graceful open vase of small lustres emits bouquet of cut crystal lustres and six scrolled arms for candles also bearing lustres. The vase supports with festoons a large-galleried incurved hexagon below, which is also festooned from the bouquet of the vase and with further festoons from its crowning flowers. The hexagon is fringed with long faceted drops, and supports double arms for lights at corners similarly enriched to the arms at crown. Three chains from the hexagon sustain a lustred galleried bowl terminated with bouquet and large cut round ball pendant.

Height of chandelier, 6 feet 3 inches; width, 3 feet 4 inches.

(Illustrated)

339—TWO CUIVRE DORÉ WALL APPLIQUÉS
Louis XVI Period

Bust of a nymph terminating in broad acanthus leaves scrolled with small leaves and buds at foot. The nymph’s lowered rudimentary arms scroll upward in the form of acanthus leaves and buds into grape-vine cusped, fluted candle sockets. Finely chiseled.

Height, 18 inches.

341—TWO CUIVRE DORE WALL APPLIQUES  Louis XVI Period

Open ribbon back, bowknotted at crown and about center, where the ribbon supports three floral arms for lights. Richly gilded.

Height, 22½ inches; width, 10½ inches.

342—IMPORTANT SILVER AND ROCK-CRYSTAL CHANDELIER  Louis XVI Period

Hexagonal balustered shaft, in four finely molded sections alternately of clear and milky white rock-crystal, interrupted by arched bands bearing varied stellate shell and pear-shaped lustres; coroneted at crown with stellate lustres forming a spreading bouquet of flowers. Four cuivre dore straps scroll from the balustered shaft into a pear-shape and have candle sockets about shoulders; these are profusely enriched with further and more varied faceted, stellate and pear-shaped rock-crystal drops occasionally diversified by some of smoked crystal, which add another feature of richness. Between each of the straps rise three arms following the general contour to about the shoulders of the pear-shape and there terminating in candle sockets; these have rock-crystal pendants in a like manner to the major body. The baluster shaft is terminated with a clear crystal ball five inches in diameter.

Height, 5 feet 8 inches; width, 3 feet 10½ inches.

(Illustrated)

343—TWO LUSTRED CUIVRE DORE CANDELABRA AND PDESTALS  Louis XIV Style

THE MADONNA AND CHILD WITH SAINTS
(A Triptych on Oblong Base)

(Panel, arched below and gabled above)

Center panel: Height, 14 inches; width, 6½ inches
Each wing: Width, 3 inches

The Madonna, seated on a throne in front of a cloth of honor, holds the Infant to her side. In front stands, on the left, St. John the Baptist, who holds a scroll inscribed: “Ecce Agnus . . .”; and on the right, Mary Magdalene with her pot of ointment. In the gabled upper portion of the painting God the Father is seen. On the inside of each of the hinged wings is painted the full-length figure of a male saint. Presumably that on the left represents St. Paul and that on the right St. Bernard.

Formerly the property of the Rev. Gerald S. Davies.

Purchased from René Gimpel, Paris.

MADONNA AND CHILD WITH SAINTS

(Panel)

Center: Height, 2\frac{1}{2} inches; width, 10 inches
Each wing: Height, 2\frac{1}{2} inches; width, 6 inches

The Madonna, standing, presents the swaddled Child. On the left of the Virgin is the diminutive half-length figure of a female Saint holding a palm-branch; and on the right is a bearded and saintly Bishop. In the left foreground are small full-length figures of St. John the Baptist and St. Margaret, and in the right are St. Anthony Abbot and St. Catherine. In the center, and to the front, are three Angels.

In the upper portion of this gabled panel, and in a circle, is the Eternal.

In each of the wings (which did not originally form part of this painting) are six Saints placed in pairs in three successive tiers: above these Saints, in each wing, is an Angel.

Formerly the property of the Rev. Gerald S. Davies.

Purchased from René Gimpel, Paris.

On the back of the panel is affixed a paper which reads: "This triptych was bought by me in Florence in September, 1877. It has been much destroyed by cleaning. The process has removed a great deal of colour.—Gerald S. Davies, Charterhouse, Godalming, 1877."

THE PASSION OF CHRIST

Height, 10 inches; length, 27\% inches

On the left, Christ is attended by the three Marys and preceded by two Roman soldiers, the foremost of whom carries a red shield inscribed: “S.P.Q.R.”; St. Longinus gazes thoughtfully at the figure of the Crucified.

The feet of Christ, on the Cross, are clasped by Mary Magdalene; on the left and right are the Virgin and St. John.

In the composition to the right the Virgin places her hands tenderly round the head of the Saviour; in the foreground and at the back are other figures.

An oblong panel which was, doubtless, at one time part of a predella.

A sheet of paper affixed to the back of this panel states: “This picture, evidently of the School of Giotto, was bought by me at Arezzo from Vincenzo Funghini, an engineer of that town and a collector of antiquities, in May, 1876. It was in much the same state as now, except that there was much dirt upon it, which was removed by Mr. Henry Merritt shortly before his death in July, 1877. The picture is painted in tempera on a ground spread thickly over a strong cloth. It has evidently formed the gradino of a larger picture. It is possible that this picture is the work of Giotto (an opinion in which Mr. Merritt concurred). A picture in the Gallery at Pisa, by an unknown hand, closely resembles it.—Gerald S. Davies, Charterhouse, 1877.”

Exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1880, No. 230, as of the Early Tuscan School.

Purchased from René Gimpel, Paris.

THREE VIRGIN MARTYRS

Each medallion: Height, 17\% inches; width, 11\% inches

Over-all measurement: Height, 14\% inches; length, 57\% inches

Each has the head turned three-quarters to the left, but not in quite the same attitude. Each has long fair hair falling on to the shoulders and holds a palm-branch in the right hand. In red and blue robes, cut low at the breast and ornamented with jewels which contain precious stones; the heads nimbed. Each wears a four-lobed ornament on the forehead. Each figure is placed in an ovoid medallion, which has the background patterned with a floriated design.

THE REST ON THE FLIGHT INTO EGYPT
(Companion picture to No. 350)

(Panel)

Height, 34 inches; width, 9½ inches

The Virgin, clad in a blue tunic with red sleeves, and an ample white mantle, is seated in the foreground; she offers her breast to the Infant. On the ground by her right side is a basket. Behind her is a wide-spreading romantic landscape with tall trees. Figures approach along a winding road, at the side of which are the shattered remains of an idol, which, according to the post-biblical legend, did obeisance. Further back are houses by the edge of a lake; in the background are many figures including mounted soldiers—emissaries of Herod—and a castle by a river on which swans float. In the distance may be discerned a shepherd with his flock, and farther away a castle on a rocky eminence. Blue sky with setting sun.

Purchased from the Seventeenth Century Gallery, New York.

This picture and its companion are allied stylistically to many pictures of that period, and notably to a Triptych which was formerly in the collection of the King of Portugal and to a large work which, in the collection of the Earl of Radnor, at Longford, was formerly regarded as the outstanding example of the art of Herri Met de Bles. For it was at one time generally agreed that he introduced into his paintings an owl, "Civetta," as a kind of signature, notably into a "Salvator Mundi" in the John G. Johnson Collection (No. 388), which is, however, today placed to the credit of the "Master of the Manzi Magdalene."
HERRI MET DE BLES—Known as "CIVETTA"
No. 349—THE REST ON THE FLIGHT INTO EGYPT
Although the signature "Henricus Blesius" is found and the existence of a "pseudo-Bles" is also presumed, pictures from the hand of Herri are extremely rare. On the other hand, the productions of his immediate followers are numerous. These are classified by Friedlander in five main groups, and several have been assigned to Jan de Beer (1475—1536) and other Antwerp Mannerists of about 1520-30. But it is now pretty generally agreed by the advanced critics that the personality, as well as the art of Bles, who takes his name from the shock of hair that he grew on his forehead, presents difficulties. Sir Martin Conway, indeed, now claims that Bles may well have been identical with Henry Patinir, of Bouvignes.

Height, 34 inches; width, 31\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches

The Virgin, wearing her traditional robes, kneels before her prié-Dieu on which is an open book. On the ground on the left is a vase containing white lilies. Above, and farther back, is the Archangel Gabriel, who, clad in blue and yellow robes, brings the message while holding in the left hand a baton round which is entwined a scroll inscribed with the words: *AVE GRACIA PLENA DOMI-

CHRIST ON THE CROSS

Center panel: Height, 25 inches; width, 11½ inches
Each wing: Height, 20 inches; width, 5 inches

The figure of Christ is outlined against a gold background. His feet rest on a suppedancum. A Cherub and a Seraiph on either side catch blood from the wounds. In the group at the foot of the Cross are the Virgin, St. Mary Magdalene, St. John and other Saints and Roman soldiers. Above the recessed arch is the Eternal seen within a trefoil.

On the wings are the Archangel Gabriel and the Virgin. Below are two full-length figures of Saints: those on the left, St. Margaret and St. Catherine; on the right, St. Nicholas and a Warrior Saint.

Inscribed along the base: AVE MARIA GRATIA.

The back of the Triptych is in part colored; in the center, a fretty, azure and gules.

Purchased from René Gimpel, Paris.

A sheet of paper on the back of the Triptych states: "This Triptych was bought by me in Florence in Sept., 1877. It is in the condition in which I purchased it and has apparently never been touched. It is evidently the work of a follower of Giotto.—GERALD S. DAVIES, Charterhouse, Godalming."

THE MADONNA AND CHILD WITH SAINTS AND ANGELS

Arched panel; Height, 23 inches; width, 13½ inches

Seated on a high wooden throne, which is gable-shaped at the back, the Virgin, in her robes of traditional colors, holds in her lap the Infant, who places the ring on the finger of St. Catherine, who stands on the left. Opposite St. Catherine, but on the right side, stands St. John the Evangelist. In front of these Saints are seen, facing each other, at the base of the throne, diminutive figures of St. John the Baptist on the left, and St. Paul on the right. Below them, in turn, stand in the foreground St. Anthony (with crutch) on the left, and St. Christopher (with the Child and palm tree) on the right. In the center foreground kneel two musical Angels. Above, and at the back of the throne, are two winged Seraphim. Plain gold background.

Purchased from René Gimpel, Paris.

To the back of the panel is affixed a letter (which is now partly torn), signed by the Rev. Gerald Davies, Master of the Charterhouse, which states: “This picture was purchased by me in May, 1876, at Arezzo from Vincenzo Funghini, an engineer of that town. The original frame had been wrenched from the panel and had, to judge from the marks, been of rich Gothic pattern. In bringing it home the panel got split down the middle. I placed it in the hands of Mr. Merritt, who mended the broken panel and replaced the detached fragments. A wonderful instance of . . . faithful restoration . . . . It is evidently by a good master of the Sienee School . . . .”

Another letter from the same collector, written in 1917 from the Master's Lodge, Charterhouse, says: “After much consideration I am of opinion that this work is from the hand of Pietro Lorenzetti. I can find no master whose work it resembles so closely. It has not been touched in any way, not even taken out of its frame since it left the hands of Henry Merritt 40 years ago.” GERALD S. DAVIES.”

THE CORONATION OF THE VIRGIN

(Arched Panel)

Height, 30 inches; width, 21 inches

Within a mandorla, or almond-shaped glory, set in a sky of burnished gold, we see Christ and the Virgin seated side by side. Above them are two Cherubim between whom are two Seraphim whose wings are deployed.

In the upper portion of this composition, but outside the mandorla, are seen twelve musical Angels, six on either side, who are represented with a trumpet, viol, keyed organ, bagpipe or zither.

Arranged in three tiers in the lower portion of the painting are male, and more to the front, female Saints. On the left are St. Paul, St. John the Baptist and St. Anthony, St. John the Evangelist and St. James; and among those on the right, we may note St. Francis, St. Peter, St. Bartholomew and two others. Included among the female Saints in the immediate foreground, which is fancifully carpeted with foliated patterns which extend a long way back and is noteworthy for its strange perspective, are Saints Rosalia, Mary Magdalene, Elizabeth of Hungary and Margaret.

Architectural background, dark sky in the center.

PORTRAIT OF A LADY
(Companion picture to No. 356)
(Panel)
Height, 20 1/2 inches; width, 9 inches

Seen at rather more than half-length; turned three-quarters to the left. She wears a black dress with red sleeves, a white chemisette and a white fur stomacher; from her white head-dress streamers fall on to her shoulders. She has rings on her fingers; in her right hand she holds a carnation; and her left rests on the table before her. Red architectural setting. In the background to the left are figures seen in front of a tall building; hills in the right distance.

Purchased from the Seventeenth Century Gallery, New York.

Probably to be dated about 1535 and recalling the type of portrait, by B. Bruyn, which is seen at Frankfort, Brussels and elsewhere, and in which a lady usually holds in her right hand a carnation in full bloom to denote her engagement. Yet a certain number of such portraits have been ascribed to the Master of the Lower Rhine.

PORTRAIT OF A YOUNG MAN

(Panel)

Height, 18 inches; width, 14 inches

Seen at half-length, the body turned to the left but the eyes directed to the front. He wears a white under-shirt beneath his dark blue doublet, the cuffs of which are edged with green, and a narrow red drapery is passed round his neck and falls loosely over his left shoulder. His right hand grasps the drapery, but his left, with the forefinger extended, points outward to some person or object that we may imagine to be in the left distance. In the left background is a dark brown parapet, or casement, beyond which is seen a cultivated landscape with a lawn running down to a winding river and, beyond it, trees and mountains. In the right background, and immediately behind the young man's head, is a pomegranate tree laden with fruit.

Purchased from Messers. Gimpel & Wildenstein.

In the collection of the Comte de Janze, in Paris, in 1867, it passed into that of M. Timbal. In 1870 M. Timbal sold by far the greater part of his collection to M. Gustave Dreyfus, and only retained a very few works, and the majority of them he bequeathed to the Louvre. M. Dreyfus, however, retained this picture for his friend, M. de Bernutz, and in 1917 it passed out of the possession of Madame de Bernutz to Messeurs. Gimpel & Wildenstein, and in 1917 into this collection.

Here, as in Lorenzo di Credi's "Portrait of a Lady" (17½" x 12¾") in the collection of Mr. Otto H. Kahn, there is a general similarity of design and clear observation. The fellow of each picture seems to be missing.

In 1917 Mr. Berenson wrote of this portrait as follows: "It is an autograph painting by Lorenzo di Credi and worthy to rank with his best works. It is a branch in which he excelled, and Vasari makes special mention of his portraits of young men.—I can't help thinking that this portrait must have had as pendant the Portrait of a Young Woman—the bride of this bridegroom. He points to her with one hand, and with the other to himself and the pomegranate bush behind him. The pomegranate was the Christian symbol of fecundity."

A girl visitor, to an agitated younger girl, seated and wearing a cream-white dress, has taken from her friend a letter of considerable moment to the owner.

Note: Engraving in gouache manner after Lavreince. Portalis and Beraldi, No. 41; E. Bocher, No. 31. Second state. Proof before all letters, but with the engraver’s name traced with a needle. The girl seated shows her left foot and two curls are added to her hair. With margin, but lacking plate line. Lady Dilke says of “L'Indiscrétion”: “Is not only one of his best, but one of the last among his work.”

From the famous Holsey Collection, No. 485 in the Catalogue, of which it was stated: “The finest impression offered in the past fifteen years.”

PORTRAIT OF A YOUNG LADY

(Attributed to François Boucher)

(Pastel)

Height, 15¾ inches; width, 12 inches

The young lady is represented half length and asleep. Her head is resting against a blue pillow and is inclined to her left shoulder. Her eyes and mouth are closed, and she seems profoundly asleep. Her hair is arranged in twists around her head and flowers are in her head near her right ear. She wears a gown cut low in front, and over it is a striped shawl. A ribbon is around her neck.

Note: The type of the young lady is closely related to types painted by Boucher. Among others it is interesting to compare it with a drawing by Boucher, formerly in the Jacques Doucet Collection, reproduced in Pierre de Nolhac: "François Boucher," page 168, and representing "Jeune Fille à la Colombe."

Bust length, facing to the front, the eyes turned toward the right. She wears pearls round her neck, in her ears and in her powdered hair. A blue ribbon in her hair falls down on to her shoulders.

Collection of M. de Fouviennes.

Charles Antoine Coypel: Painter and engraver. Born in Paris in 1696; died there in 1752. Pupil of his father, Antoine Coypel, whom he succeeded in his official positions as "Premier Peintre" to the King, and as Director of the Academy and of the Crown Pictures and Designs. He was a very versatile artist. He executed, outside of religious and mythological canvases, many portraits in oil and pastel. He also decorated many apartments in the Château de Versailles and made cartoons for a great number of tapestries. Among portraits executed by him there are several in the Louvre, one of Adrienne Lecouvreur in the Countess de Boulinecourt Collection; one of Guillaume Aubourg and his wife in the Baroness Levasseur Collection, etc. Coypel also executed the portraits of Louis XV, of the Duke of Orléans, of Molière and other famous personages.

A PASTORAL SCENE

(Canvas)

Height, 16½ inches; width, 13½ inches

(Companion to the following)

In a summer landscape, bounded on the left by a term and on the right by a vase beneath the trees, a group of six persons are frolicking. On the right a lady, wearing a white satin dress, is playing on a musical instrument. More to the left, but by her side, kneels a man who is dressed in gay attire and knee-breeches. On the ground, between his legs, is a small dog. Behind the two principal figures stands a pierrot. In the background to the left are a young man and a girl and another man. Blue sky.

Purchased from Gimpel & Wildenstein.

Note: This and the following picture are very typical of Pater's work, the painter par excellence of the "Fêtes Galantes." It is interesting, among others, to compare them with "A Pastoral" in the Sir Edgar Vincent Collection, and with another in the Buckingham Palace, both reproduced by Eugène Lagnevin in J. J. Foster's "French Art from Watteau to Prud'hon," Vol. II, pages 51 and 56.

THE IMPRISONED BIRD

(Canvas)

Height, 11 1/2 inches; length, 14 1/2 inches

On the right, under a tree in a park, a young woman is sitting on a hillock of grass. She wears a yellow dress, with pink sleeves, and a light apron. Her head is turned toward the left, as she makes a feint of opening, with her right hand, the door of a wicker-work bird-cage, from which the "imprisoned" bird is seeking to escape. She is ready to seize the little creature in her left hand. On the left a young gallant reclines against the bank. He is in yellow-blue attire, with knee-breeches, and wears a felt hat which is adorned with multicolored ribbons. He holds a flageolet which he has just been playing.

Purchased from Jacques Seligmann.

Note: A different version of the same picture by Lancret, called "The Bird Fancier," is in the collection of the German Emperor and is reproduced by Eugène Langevin in J. J. Foster’s "French Art from Watteau to Prud’hon," Vol. I, page 136.

Purchased from S. J. Frank, New York.

These works recall the much larger canvases by Boucher entitled "The Shepherd Watching" (No. 385) and "The Shepherd Piping" (No. 399), signed and dated 1745, in the Wallace Collection, London. (See the catalogue of 1913, and see A. Michel, "F. Boucher," page 104.) They more closely resemble the famous set of four compositions entitled "Les Charmes du Printemps," "Les Délices de l'Automne" and "Les Amusements de l'Hiver" which were painted by Boucher for Madame de Pompadour. The master in these works (which measure the same as these two) produced an ouvré capitale, in which he displayed with brilliant success the infinite resources of his talent. That set, signed and dated 1755, was engraved by T. Daullé and dedicated to "Madame de Pompadour, dame du Palais de la Reine." After her death they passed to her brother, the Marquis de Marigny, and appeared in his sale. They later passed to Madame Ridgway, and were in time included (Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7) in the sale of her effects in Paris, December 3, 1904. They are dealt with by A. Michel, "F. Boucher," page 88, and illustrated in Les Arts, March, 1905; also they are mentioned by Pierre de Nolhac, "F. Boucher," 1907, page 190. The set of four is now in the collection formed by Mr. H. C. Frick, of New York. But they do not overshadow this pair.

(Panel)

Height, 10½ inches; width, 8½ inches

Antiope, almost entirely nude and seen at full length as she reclines on green and pink draperies beneath the wide-spreading branches of a tree, is being discovered by the revolting Jupiter. He steadily approaches from behind the tree; in its branches hangs the quiver of Cupid, who is seated in the left foreground and holds a lighted torch in his right hand. Blue sky in the right background.

From the collection of Comte de Lavaudry, and from the collection of the Comte de Marbonne Peled.

Purchased from Gimpel & Wildenstein.

All lovers of the magnificent art of the short-lived Watteau will recall the larger, oval-shaped and different composed painting of the same subject which, after being in the d’Arenberg, Boullon de Sarty and Patureau Sales, passed into the Louvre. It is there (No. 991) still admired as one of that Museum’s greatest treasures. Yet this were worthy to hang next to it.

This beautiful little picture is a slightly changed version of Watteau’s much larger and famous picture in the Louvre, representing the same subject and reproduced in Edmond Pilon: “Watteau et son école,” 1912, page 114. The Louvre picture is oval-shaped and shows Antiope sleeping with her left arm hanging down, while in the picture here reproduced it is thrown around her head. As for the Cupid seated on the ground, his quiver and torch, they are omitted in the Louvre picture, for which more probably the one here reproduced was a preliminary study. In both pictures the flesh and coloring are of exquisite beauty.

ANTOINE WATTEAU: Born in Valenciennes in 1684; died at Nogent, near Vincennes, in 1721. Pupil of Claude Gillot. Was received by the Académie Royale in 1717 at the presentation of his famous picture, “L’Embarquement pour l’Ile de Cythère,” in the Louvre. He was the inventor and the head of the charming school of painters of “Fêtes Galantes,” and one of the finest colorists among the artists of the eighteenth century.

LADIES BATHING ("LES Baigneuses")
(Canvas)
Height, 27 inches; length, 33\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches

Eight ladies in different postures, four of them already in the stream; the others are resting on the bank. The water runs apace, and rushes grow on the edge of the stream. Overhanging trees on the near bank on the right, and others in more luxuriant foliage on the far bank on the left. Cloud cumuli in the sky.

This is said to have been at one time in the Wafcrdin Collection, but the "Baigneuses," No. 79 in that collection, sold in April, 1880, at the Hôtel Drouot, is described as a panel measuring 6\(\frac{3}{4}\) inches by 9\(\frac{3}{4}\) inches. Yet this painting of "Les Baigneuses" may perhaps be identifiable with one in the Wafcrdin Collection.

At one time in the collection of Baron de Beurnonville, and sold May 9-16, 1881, No. 60; described in the catalogue as "a charming sketch; a repetition by the master of the picture in the Lacaze Collection in the Louvre."

Subsequently in the possession of Baron Franchetti and of Vicomte Jacques de Causon; apparently also included in a Vente Judiciaire in June, 1887. (Portalis, "Fragonard," 1889, page 271.)

A comparison of this fine painting with that in the Louvre (No. 293) in no way detracts from either. (See Portalis: "Fragonard," page 69.)

In the "Exposition d'Œuvres de Fragonard," held in Paris, 1921, was included a picture entitled "Baigneuses" (No. 30), of 1765-67, measuring 25 inches by 32 inches, and described as being from the collection of the Comtesse Tysziewicz and lent by Jean Bartholoni. It is a slightly different version.

Another picture representing "Les Baigneuses" was included in this exhibition (No. 96 of the Catalogue), belonging to the Duc de Fallières Collection and lent by Madame La Comtesse H. de Gonfaut-Biron, in Paris. As for the picture we are concerned with here, it is also mentioned in the work by Pierre de Nolhac on Jean Honore Fragonard, page 119.

PORTRAIT OF MADEMOISELLE COLOMBE AS "VENUS"

(Canvas—Oval)

Height, 32 inches; width, 18½ inches

Light-toned, classically conceived portrait. The young lady, with fair hair and blue eyes, is seen at half length; in full face and nude to the waist. The lower part of her form is enveloped in pink and white draperies of flimsy texture. With her right hand she points to her emblematic dove, in the right corner; in her upraised left hand she holds the apple of Venus. Opaque clouds in the upper sky that forms the light-keyed background.

Marie Thérèse Théodore Romboudi-Riggieri was born in Venice, October 22, 1754. Taken, together with her sister Marie (called Adeline), to Paris while still a child by her father, she entered the Comédie Italienne in 1776. There she became acquainted with the Comte de Masserone, known as Lord Mazarin, who fell desperately in love with her, and, as it is said, "bought her from her parents for 100 louis d’or." Mlle. Colombe, as she was known as a singer on the stage, gained an increasing reputation by the parts she played in "Le Baron," "Tom Jones," "Le Bûcheron," "Lucille," "Le Roi et le Fermier," "Le Déserteur" and such plays. She retired from the stage in 1788, after seventeen years of active work, with a pension, and settled at Versailles, but her later life was not of high repute. Grimm said that she "had the most beautiful eyes in the world." Grimm, Bachaumont and Boldini praised her very highly; Falconet executed her portrait in marble; also her contemporaries acknowledged her beauty:

"chez elle il faut s’appareillard
Si dans ses mains je tombe
Quelle me transforme en raimier.
Car j’aime la Colombe."

Mlle. Colombe, or Colombe Päinée, is distinguished from her sister Marie-Madeleine, known also as Colombe Cadette or as Adeline. The latter was born at Florence, December 15, 1760, and died at Versailles, February 4, 1841. The portrait of Marie Madeleine Riggieri (known as Adeline) was also painted by E. Fragonard, and that about 1775-76; it is an oval and measures 23 inches by 19 inches. From the Doucet Sale, Paris, 1912 (No. 140), it passed to Mme. L. G. Thompson, who lent it (No. 54) to the Fragonard Exhibition held in Paris in 1921. Another portrait of Adeline by Fragonard was found at Saint Brice in the country house of her sister Mlle. Colombe—whence also comes the present work—and is to-day in the collection of Baron Edouard de Rothschild.

From the collection of the Château de Saint Brice.

Bought from Gimpel & Wildenstein.

PORTRAIT OF A LADY

(Pastel—Oval)

Height, 23 inches; width, 19 inches

She is represented in an oval, half-length, facing toward the right and her head turned to the left. She wears a gown cut low in front and trimmed with ribbons and lace. Over it is a rich mantle trimmed with fur and around her neck is a pearl necklace. Her soft wavy hair is combed back from her forehead and her beautiful face has a smiling expression.

She was one of the daughters of Jean Pierre Roch de Chastagner, seigneur of Lagrange and of Labruyère, who was a son of Jean Pierre de Chastagner de Lagrange, doctor and lawyer, by his wife Demoiselle Marguerite de Téissier du Rossier de Tagnac; he married, February 8, 1744, Demoiselle Marie Elisabeth de Mirman de La Tour, of the town of Saint Aubreis. She was a daughter of Messire Francois de Mirman, seigneur of La Tour, by his wife Suzanne Benigne de Lacoste. This Francois Mirman, of La Tour, was the brother of the celebrated pastellist.

Another pastel portrait of this lady by La Tour, seen three-quarters to the left and measuring 15 inches by 12 inches, is mentioned in the "Catalogue des Pastels de M. Quentin de la Tour, composant La Collection de Saint-Quentin," published in Paris, 1920, page 29. Therein will be found much biographical matter regarding the family.

This pastel was purchased from Madame Plisent of Nice, France, née Chastagner de Lagrange.

A pastel head of the same lady, which probably was a sketch for the same picture, is reproduced in Herman Erhard: "La Tour, der Pastellmaler Louis XV," 1918, pl. 49a.

MAURICE QUENTIN DE LA TOUR: Born in Saint Quentin in 1704; died in 1788. Worked only in pastel and was the most famous pastellist of the time.

ATELIER OF THE DELLA ROBBIA

390—A RECTANGULAR GLAZED TERRA-COTTA RELIEF REPRESENTING A CHERUB’S HEAD

Against a dark blue background is seen a six-winged cherub, glazed in white. His hair is gilded and behind his head is seen a nimbus. Along the base is a twisted pattern.

Height, 8\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches; width, 16 inches.

This cherub’s head, made in the Della Robbia’s atelier, has its prototype in Andrea’s heads of cherubs, in whose atelier an innumerable number of them were produced. Among those still extant there is one in the Berlin Museum; one in the Borinwind Collection in Newport.

ATELIER OF ANDREA DELLA ROBBIA

391—A GLAZED TERRA-COTTA RELIEF REPRESENTING THE ADORATION OF THE INFANT JESUS

Florentine Late Fifteenth or Early Sixteenth Century

Within an arched niche, bordered by an egg-and-dart pattern, is seen the Virgin, kneeling and adoring the Infant Jesus, reclining naked on a cushion. Above, in the clouds, is seen the Eternal Father with uplifted hands, and surrounding him are five winged cherubs. Nimbi are behind their heads. The Holy Dove is seen at the left above the head of the Infant Jesus. The exterior of the arch is bordered by a continuous garland of fruit and flowers painted in various colors. On top, in the center, is a vase of flowers, and at the base, below an egg-and-dart molding and a frieze of leaves, is seen a winged and nimbed cherub’s head.

Height, 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches; width, 26\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches.

This relief is derived from the LA VERNA altarpiece, the most popular of Andrea’s compositions. A great number of variants of it are scattered in museums and private collections. Some of them show the Madonna and Child with God the Father, six cherubs and dove; others are with five cherubs and dove; still others with two cherubs, dove, and two angels, etc. Mr. Allan Marquand, in his work on Andrea della Robbia, pages 19-42, gives a complete list of all these reliefs. As for reliefs showing exactly the same composition as the relief here reproduced, there are, among others, the one formerly in the Spitzer Collection (Catalogue de la Collection Spitzcr, 1893, Pl. XXXVIII, No. 1288); one in the Berlin Museum (Frida Schottmüller: “Die Italienischen und Spanischen Bildwerke der Renaissance und des Barocks,” page 45, Fig. 103); one in the Martin A. Ryerson Collection in Chicago (Marquand: “Andrea della Robbia,” Vol. II, page 23, Fig. 150); one in the Church of Santa Maria in Consolazione in Genoa (Marquand: Ibid., Vol. II, page 25, Fig. 151); two in the National Museum in Florence, one in the South Kensington Museum, etc.

392—A PAINTED TERRA-COTTA BUST REPRESENTING SAINT CATHERINE OF SIENA

Saint Catherine of Siena is seen facing to the front. She wears a white wimple, framing her face and draped in front. Over it is a white veil and over her shoulders a blue mantle. The face and eyes are painted in natural colors. The bust is standing on a yellow detachable stand.

Height, 14 1/2 inches; width of base, 18 inches.

Saint Catherine of Siena was a favorite subject with the Sienese artists, and busts of the same kind are met with in museum and private collections. There is, among others, the same bust in the Berlin Museum, given by Bode to Benedetto da Mejano (Denkmäler . . . Pl. 436, page 111), and which Schubring in his work, "Die Plastik Sienas im Quattrocento," page 150, gives to Giovanni di Stefano.

393—ITALIAN MARBLE BUST OF AN INFANT

Thin drapery falls from the left shoulder. The face slightly turned toward the right. The hair parted down the middle and falling on to the nape of the neck. On a green and gilt wood base. Found in a tomb.

Bust, 10 1/2 by 10 1/2 inches.

From the Lazzaroni Collection, Rome.

Purchased from Canessa Brothers.

Note: Reminiscent of a bust by Desiderio da Settignano in the collection of M. Gustave Dreyfus, and reproduced in Les Arts, December, 1907, page 3.
A SOUTH TYROL PAINTED AND GILDED STATUE REPRESENTING SAINT FLORIAN

Late Fifteenth Century

Saint Florian is standing on a round wooden base, his legs crossed and wearing a full armor over which is draped a mantle covering his back and shoulders, attached in front with folds gathered under his left arm. The head of the Saint is slightly bent forward, toward the right, and on his thick curly hair is a rolled flat cap. Both forearms, which are missing, were originally most probably holding a bucket or pitcher of water, recalling Saint Florian in the act of extinguishing fire. Flesh painted in natural colors.

Height, 31 inches.

Formerly in the collection of Baron Eugen von Müller zu Eichholz, in Vienna.

Reproduced in the work by Julius Leisching: "Figurale Holzplastik . . . ." Wien, 1908, Pl. 53, Fig. 111.

Saint Florian, one of the eight tutelar saints of Austria, who among other miracles is said to have extinguished a conflagration by throwing a pitcher full of water over the flames, is rarely or almost never met with in Italian art. He is a favorite Saint in Germany and in Austria, and he is frequently represented there in paintings and in sculptures. The statue here reproduced belongs to the best specimens of its kind, and the costume, as well as the type and the arrangement of the hair, is characteristic of the Tyrolean art of the late fifteenth century.

395—A TERRA-COTTA STATUETTE REPRESENTING SAINT JOHN THE BAPTIST AS A CHILD

Florentine Late Fifteenth Century

Saint John the Baptist, wearing a short dress of animal skin which exposes his chest, arms and legs, is getting up from a trunk of a tree against which he was seated. He is about to walk toward the left. Over his left arm is draped a mantle, and in his left hand is an unfolded scroll.

Height, 20 inches.

Purchased from Lowengard, Paris.

The subject of Saint John the Baptist, represented as a Child, was a favorite one with the artists in Italy in the fifteenth century. The best known are those by Michelozzo in the Opera del Duomo and in the National Museum in Florence; the one by Verrocchio in the Berlin Museum, and the one by Rossellino in the National Museum in Florence. In comparing the above-mentioned statuette with the ones just mentioned, we find most analogies with the ones by Michelozzo, from which it undoubtedly derives. (See reproduction in Venturi: "Storia dell'Arte Italiana," Vol. VI, page 365, Fig. 228; and Alinari, No. 3715).

396—A GILT BRONZE LOCK AND HASP

Italian (Roman) Second Half of Sixteenth Century

In the center, on the hasp, is seen the Goddess Ceres, standing and supporting on her head a basket of corn. She wears a sleeveless floating gown girdled at the waist. Below is the coat-of-arms of the princely Orsini family of Rome, which are: "Bandé de gu. et d’argent; au chef du sec., chargé d’une rose de gn. et soutenu d’une devise d’or chargé d’une anguille ondoyante en fasce d’or." These arms are represented at the left of the shield, while at the right are those of an unidentified family by alliance. The lock itself shows a rich decoration of trophies, vases, masks and two reclining human figures. Affixed to a red velvet mount.

Extreme height, 9$$\frac{3}{4}$$ inches; width, 7 inches.

The fact that this richly decorated and highly finished lock has been made for the Orsini family is of the greatest interest. This princely family is among the most famous in Italy. Their origin goes back to the tenth century and their principal titles are: Seigneurs of Monterotondo; Counts of Nola, of Pitigliano, of Manupello, of Lecce; Dukes of Bracciano, of Gravina, of Venosa; Princes of Taranto, etc. Three members of their family were elected Popes, one in 1191 under the name of Celestin III, the second in 1277 as Nicolas III, and the third in 1724 as Benedict XIII. Other high charges were held by members of the Orsini family on whom the titles of Prince of Sobroa and the Prince of the Holy Empire were conferred.

397—NORTH ITALIAN BRONZE MORTAR Late Sixteenth Century

Circular and wide-mouthed. Ornamented with circular bands, the upper having floral forms set between two medallions which contain the Sacred Monogram; the lower band, of diversified anthemion pattern. Inscribed round the rim: SANCTA MARIA DI JESU, and dated MDLXXXXX. On a detachable base. Dark patina.

Height, 11$$\frac{1}{2}$$ inches.

This mortar is of excellent workmanship and shows the same form as a mortar of an earlier period in the Louvre, reproduced in the Catalogue of Bronzes, page 47, No. 38.

ANTIQUE ITALIAN BRONZE CANDLESTICK

Paduan Sixteenth Century

The bronze candlestick is shaped in the form of a fish, with a human and bearded head. The fins form the base and the candle-socket is set within the curve of the tail. Dark brown patina.

Height, 3½ inches; length, 7 inches.

It is interesting to compare this candlestick with two inkstands of the same character in the National Museum in Florence and in the Este Museum in Modena, reproduced in Bode: “The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance,” Vol. I, Pl. 46.

The lion is trotting forward, his right front leg raised from the ground. His head is turned toward the right and his mouth is slightly open. The long tail is lashed between the legs and turned over the back.

Height, 4½ inches.

Formerly in the S. E. Kennedy Collection in London; sold March, 1918, No. 429.
Purchased from Jacques Seligmann, Paris.

This animal, of excellent workmanship, is a slight variation of the walking lion in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection, reproduced in Bode: "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. II, page 2, Fig. 13.

400—A BRONZE INKSTAND

Paduan Early Sixteenth Century

The inkstand is formed of a round vessel supported on the right shoulder of a bearded man. He is kneeling on one leg and his left hand is placed on his left knee while supporting the vessel or receptacle for ink with his right arm. Brown patina.

Height, with base, 8 inches.

The composition is a derivation of the famous inkstand formerly in the Taylor Collection in London, reproduced in Bode: "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. I, page 29, Fig. 23. There is a similar group in the Caruso Collection in New York; another group showing great similarity is in the Martin le Roy Collection in Paris, and still another in the Berlin Museum.
The quadrilateral cover, which is ornamented with female busts and, at each corner, with the figure of an eagle with wings deployed, is surmounted by a Cupid who reclines on the back of a dolphin. The quadrangular base is fluted and ornamented with swags of foliage; at either end is an armorial shield, and at either side a lion’s head. The interior has four compartments, and the tray is removable. Brown patina.

Height, 8 inches; length, 8 3/4 inches; width, 6 inches.

Subsequently in that of S. E. Kennedy, London, and by him exhibited at the Royal Academy, 1904, Case G, No. 14.

Sold at Christie’s, March 20, 1918, No. 405.

Purchased from Jacques Seligmann, Paris.

The inkstand, of excellent and most decorative qualities, is a characteristic example of Venetian workmanship in the second half of the sixteenth century. It shows similarity in the conception and in the decoration with an inkstand formerly in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection, reproduced in Bodé: “The Italian Bronze Statuettes in the Morgan Collection,” Vol. II, Pl. 135, No. 197.
Three winged putti touch the support of the candlestick as they move around it. Their feet tread on a garland of foliage placed on the ground. The base is triangular and rests on voluted feet.

Height, 9 inches.

403—ITALIAN SIXTEENTH CENTURY BRONZE STATUETTE: "MERCURY AND CUPID"

Mercury, without talaria, is standing; his left foot touches lightly his winged petasus. With his right hand he holds a drapery to Cupid, who, on the ground by his right side, places his left hand between Mercury's petasus. On a black wood base. Brown patina.

Height, 7 inches; with base, 10 inches.

404—A PAIR OF ITALIAN BRONZE URNS

Venetian Late Sixteenth Century

Around the body is a decoration of three heads of winged putti, placed between each two of the three handles. The lower part is decorated with palmettes and acanthus leaves. On the rim is an egg-and-dart decoration. Standing on brown yellow marble plinths. Brown patina.

Height, 11 1/2 inches.

Purchased from Jacques Seligmann, Paris.
Possibly by Alessandro Algardi or by an artist near to him. The one on the left has turned his head toward the left; a drapery falls from his left shoulder and conceals his left hand; the right hand is raised above the head. Seated on a verde antico marble three-sided plinth.

The one on the right looks out wistfully toward the right, his left hand extended. A drapery conceals his right arm and, carried round the back of his body, falls on to his left leg. Seated on a verde antico marble three-sided plinth. Black patina.

Height, over all, 1½ inches.
The God, represented standing, is nude. His right arm placed behind him and resting on his hip. His left hand is raised and grasps an arrow (detachable). He looks down at the long-tailed three-headed monster which crouches at his feet. On a rectangular base.

Height, 12 inches; with base, 15 1/4 inches.

Purchased from Jacques Seligmann, Paris.

There is in the South Kensington Museum in London an identical statuette of Hercules, where the monster, however, is missing. It is reproduced in Bode: "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. III, Pl. 290, where it is called Venetian, second half of the sixteenth century.
407—BRONZE STATUETTE OF BACCHUS

Italian Late Sixteenth or Early Seventeenth Century

Bacchus is represented full length, nude, except for a goat’s skin falling over his left arm across a small portion of his body. He is slender and youthful and faces to the front with flowing hair, his right arm thrown over his head and the hand holding a bunch of grapes. In the left hand, of which the arm hangs down, he is holding another bunch of grapes. Below, seated beside Bacchus, is a leopardess, raising its paw and trying to reach up toward the grapes. Dark brown patina. On a green marble rectangular base.

Height, 9 1/2 inches; with base, 13 1/2 inches.

Purchased from Lowengard, Paris.

Another replica of the same statuette was formerly in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection, coming from the Pfungst Collection, and reproduced and described by Bode: "The Collection of Bronzes in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection," Vol. I, Pl. 70, No. 104.
Reproduction, on a very small scale, of the well-known statue of Bartolomeo Colleoni (died 1475), the famous condottiere, modeled in 1481 by Andrea del Verrocchio and cast by Leopardi, and now placed in the Campo Santi Giovanni e Paolo, Venice.

Height, 14 inches; the base, 7 inches high and 15 inches long.
409—FLEMISH SEVENTEENTH CENTURY BRONZE GROUP:
"ST. GEORGE Slaying the Dragon"

The soldier Saint, mounted on his steed, which prances over the form of the half-conquered dragon, is about to deliver the final blow. On a brown wood base.

Height, 8½ inches; with base, 11½ inches.
ALESSANDRO VITTORIA

A PAIR OF BRONZE CANDLESTICKS

Venetian Second Half of Sixteenth Century

Each candlestick is formed by a nude figure of a boy supporting with both arms, against his head, a fluted vase which serves for the socket for the candle. The base upon which the figures are standing is formed of three seahorses resting their front feet on strapwork pattern. Three winged putti are placed between them. The feet of each candlestick are decorated with acanthus leaves.

Formerly in the J. E. Taylor Collection in London.

Reproduced and described in the Sale Catalogue, July 1, 1912, Pl. 10, as by Jacopo Sansovino.

The attribution of the candlesticks to Alessandro Vittoria is based on the fact that they bear a close relationship with his works. An identical candlestick coming from the Simon Collection in Berlin is reproduced by Bode; "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. III, Pl. 201, and is given by him to Alessandro Vittoria. A putto of the same kind, holding a vase on his head, is in the Imperial Museum in Vienna, and is reproduced in Julius von Schlosser; "Werke der Kleineplastik in der Skulpturen Sammlung des Allerhöchsten Kaiserhauses," Vol. I, Pl. XX, No. 4.

A BRONZE INKSTAND IN THE MANNER OF ALESSANDRO VITTORIA

Three winged and bearded satyrs whose bodies terminate in dolphins' tails support the receptacle for the ink, formed of a round bowl with cover and decorated with a conventional leaf-work pattern.

Height, 7 1/2 inches.

The lower part of the inkstand, which is the interesting part, shows great similarity in the decoration and in the conception with candlesticks formerly in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection, given to Alessandro Vittoria and reproduced in Bode: "Catalogue of Bronzes in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection," Vol. II, Pl. 137, No. 200.
412—EARLY SIXTEENTH CENTURY ITALIAN PADUAN BRONZE INKSTAND: "GOOSE AND GANDER"

Designed as a group of two birds placed on a tuft of grass and set on a base cast with three cherub-heads, foliage and scrolls. The whole is set on a triangular grained red marble plinth. Dark patina.

Height, 7 1/2 inches; with base, height, 8 1/2 inches.

Formerly in the collection of S. E. Kennedy, London, sold March 20, 1918, No. 416.

Purchased from Jacques Seligmann, Paris.

This inkstand, which is of excellent quality, is a characteristic specimen of Paduan workmanship of the School of Riccio in the early sixteenth century.
A Centaur lying on the ground with fore feet extended as if about to rise. Holds a club in upraised right hand, and a shield of classical design on the left fore arm. On a dark green marble base.

Height, 6⅜ inches; length, 8½ inches.

Bought from J. & S. Goldschmidt.

Referred to by Dr. von Bode, in a letter of Oct. 23, 1912, as follows: "The bronze you showed me, a 'Centaur with a Club and in his Left Hand a Shield,' is a fine Italian example of the 16th century. I have never seen this model before. Judging from the shape of the shield, this bronze is of the Venetian or Paduan school."
EARLY SIXTEENTH CENTURY PADUAN BRONZE INK-STAND: “PROMETHEUS AND THE EAGLE”

The nude, bearded figure is lying face upward, with his back arched and his knees bent and bound to the rock. His head rests on a projecting stump, to which his right hand is attached. His left hand is manacled to the ground. The cover of the inkstand fits into an aperture in his breast and is formed of an eagle standing on a tuft with wings outspread. The base is formed of four projecting arms and is inscribed: BERNARDINUS MAGISTER LUCCELLUS IVD. Dark brown patina.

Height, 8 inches; length, 10 inches.

Exhibited at the Burlington Fine Arts Club, 1912, No. 62, Plate XXVI, page 79.

From the collection of S. E. Kennedy, London.

Purchased from Jacques Seligmann, Paris.
415—SIXTEENTH CENTURY ITALIAN BRONZE MORTAR

Finely chased in each quarter with allegorical scenes, set above swags of foliage which, at each side, depend from masks. In the center of each side is an armorial shield, displaying the arms of the House of Este, and of the Dukes of Ferrara and Modena. On a rectangular marble support.

Height, 5 3/4 inches; depth, 5 1/2 inches.

Base: Height, 4 3/4 inches; width, 4 inches.

From the collections of Louis Huth, E. Govett and S. E. Kennedy, London.

416—BRONZE INKSTAND IN THE FORM OF A MERMAID

Venetian Second Half of Sixteenth Century

A nude seated female figure is seen to below the waist, the lower part of her body ending in twisted fishtails. Between them is placed the receptacle for ink, and the cover of it is formed by the head of Medusa. The whole rests upon ball feet, and in front is seen a coat-of-arms, most probably belonging to the Trevisan family of Venice: "Gold, a hand gules with six stars of same in orle." The mermaid, or sea-nymph, wears a helmet on her head and her body is slightly bent forward, while she looks in front of her. She is holding on to the rim of the inkstand with one hand, while in the other is a hook on the cover of which is inscribed PROTOCOLI, I.A.

Height, 5½ inches.

Formerly in the collection of Sir George Donaldson of London, who sold it privately to S. E. Kennedy.

Purchased from Duveen Brothers.

Another inkstand of identical form was formerly in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection (Bode: "Catalogue of Bronzes in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection," Vol. II, Pl. 129, No. 188); still another is in the Foulé Collection in Paris (Bode: "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. II, Pl. 169). Bode in speaking of the Morgan inkstand, in the introduction to the Catalogue, page xxxviii, says: "An inkstand of fantastic design also belongs to the school of Sansovino—a mermaid wearing a helmet and holding between her twisted fishtails a wide-mouthed receptacle to hold the ink. This inkstand must have been very popular in Venice as a number of copies of it have come down to us."

449—BRONZE STATUETTE REPRESENTING DAVID STANDING ON THE HEAD OF GOLIATH

Paduan Second Half of the Fifteenth Century

David is represented full length, with long curly hair and wearing a short tunic girdled at the waist. A sling is across his shoulder. He is looking down at the head of Goliath, lying at his feet, and into which he plunges the sword held in his right hand. Placed on a square ebonized plinth. Dark patina.

Height, 97/8 inches.

Formerly in the Pfungst, J. P. Morgan and J. E. Taylor Collections.

Reproduced and described in the Catalogue of the J. E. Taylor Collection, Sale July 1, 1912, Pl. No. 11.

Purchased from Duveen Brothers.

The group is of great importance, as well for its artistic achievement and beauty as for the fact that it is a characteristic specimen of Bartolommeo Bellano's workmanship. The subject itself was in great favor with the artists of the time. The best known specimens of the same composition are those in the South Kensington Museum in London and in the Foulc Collection in Paris, reproduced in Bode: "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. I, Pl. 420—A BRONZE GROUP REPRESENTING NEPTUNE AND THE MONSTER
Paduan Late Fifteenth Century

The Marine God is represented nude, standing on the back of the sea dragon which he was originally holding with a chain, now broken off. In the right hand he is holding the trident, while looking down at the monster. His head is massive, his hair thick and curly and his beard is thick and cut short.

Formerly in the Bucquet Collection. Height, 17 inches.

Purchased from Jacques Seligmann, Paris.

The figure of Neptune is of excellent workmanship. The group itself forms a slightly different version of the famous group formerly in the Spitzer, Hainauer and J. Pierpont Morgan Collections, reproduced, among others, in the "Catalogue of Bronzes in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection" by Bode, Vol. 1, Pl. XVI, No. 19, and in Bode: "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. 1, Pl. XXIV, where are also reproduced two other versions of the same subject, in the National Museum in Florence.

427- A Bronze Group Representing Jupiter and the Eagle

Italian Second Half of the Sixteenth Century

The God, standing nude and at his full length, with his left hand to his breast and holding a thunderbolt in his right. His right foot is placed on the back of his emblematic eagle, who looks up as if prepared to do his bidding. The whole is placed on a quadrangular base ornamented on each side with a gorgon’s head set above a swag of foliage. Dark patina.

Purchase from Jacques Seligmann, Paris.

This statuette, representing Zeus with his sacred and customary attributes, is of very fine workmanship. It is interesting to compare with it a group representing the same subject in the Imperial Museum in Vienna of the School of Jacopo Sansovino reproduced in Julius von Schlösser: "Werke der Kleoplastik des Alterthümsen Kaiserhauses," Vol. I, Pl. XIX, No. 1.

ITALIAN BRONZE STATUETTE OF THE "FARNESE HERCULES"

Seen nude and standing at his full height, bearded and severe of aspect. His left foot advanced. His right hand placed behind his back. His left hand rests on the lion’s skin, which, placed upon his club, rests upon a tree trunk. Dark patina.

Purchased from S. E. Letts.

Height, 15 inches.

This statuette is made after the Farnese Hercules in the National Museum at Naples which was found at Rome in the Thermae of Caracalla in 1540.
WORKSHOP OF GIAN DA BOLOGNA

FOUR BRONZE GROUPS (ITALIAN LATE SIXTEENTH CENTURY) REPRESENTING THE LABORS OF HERCULES

First—HERCULES SLAYING THE NEMEAN LION
Second—HERCULES WRESTLING WITH THE CRETAN BULL
Third—HERCULES AND THE LERNEAN HYDRA
Fourth—HERCULES WRESTLING WITH ANTAEUS

Nos. 429 to 432, inclusive

The Labors of Hercules were a favorite subject with the artists of the Renaissance period and especially with the Florentine artists, such as Gian Bologna and his followers. The principal museums and private collections possess groups representing these labors. Some of them are by Gian Bologna himself, others are made in his atelier, still others are by his followers or contemporaries. The examples mentioned above and illustrated in the following pages are characteristic of the workshop of Gian Bologna, and examples of the same kind can be found in the National Museum in Florence, in the Louvre, in the Wallace Collection in London, in the Castello Sforzesco in Milan, and elsewhere.
Hercules is represented naked, with short thick hair and beard. He is standing in an attitude of great tension, trying to tear open, with both hands, the mouth of the Nemean lion, which was considered invulnerable. The lion is defending its life with its claws and is trying to pull Hercules down. Brown patina. Standing on a rectangular base.

Height, 12½ inches.

Purchased from J. & S. Goldschmidt.

WORKSHOP OF GIAN DA BOLOGNA

430—HERCULES WRESTLING WITH THE CRETAN BULL

Italian Late Sixteenth Century

Hercules is represented naked, except for the floating lion's skin around his shoulders. He is wrestling with the mad bull, who has been sent up by Poseidon to ravage the island of Crete. Hercules is grasping the animal by the horns, crushing it down with the weight of his right leg. Brown patina. Standing on a rectangular base.

Height, 11 3/4 inches.

Purchased from J. & S. Goldschmidt.

It is interesting to compare this group with the group representing the same subject in the Wallace Collection, in London, reproduced in Bode: "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. III, Pl. 199.

431—HERCULES AND THE LERNEAN HYDRA

Italian Late Sixteenth Century

Hercules is seen naked, with thick curly hair and short beard. He is standing over the Hydra of Lerna in the act of giving it the final blow with the club which he is holding in the upraised right hand, while with the other hand he is seizing the animal by its tail. Brown patina. Standing on a rectangular base.

Heights, 16 inches.

Purchased from J. & S. Goldschmidt.

It is interesting to compare this group with one representing the same subject by Gian Bologna, reproduced in the work by Bode mentioned above, Vol. III, Pl. 209.
WORKSHOP OF GIAN DA BOLOGNA

432—HERCULES WRESTLING WITH ANTEUS

Italian Late Sixteenth Century

The nude Hercules is represented standing with his legs wide apart, and with his body thrown backward. His attitude shows great tension in his act of lifting up Antæus, who is struggling violently with him, his strength being only invincible as long as he remained in contact with the earth. Brown patina. Standing on a triangular base. Height, 15½ inches.

Purchased from J. & S. Goldschmidt.

The composition of this group is exactly the same as the group representing the same subject in the Louvre and executed by Gian Bologna. Reproduced in Bode: "The Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. III, Pl. 198.

433 A BRONZE STATUETTE REPRESENTING VENUS
Florentine Second Half of the Sixteenth Century

Venus is represented naked, standing on a sloping wavy base. Her beautifully shaped body is slightly thrown to the left, and the weight of it rests on her right leg. The Goddess appears here as rising from the sea, and as a reminiscence of it she is holding a shell in her uplifted left hand.

Height, 19½ inches.

Purchased from J. & S. Goldschmidt, December, 1911.

This fine statuette is very near in type and attitude to the statuette of Minerva from the Hoseltine Collection, London, given to Benvenuto Cellini, and reproduced in Bode: “The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance,” Vol. II, Pl. 146.

AN ITALIAN BRONZE GROUP REPRESENTING HERCULES AND ANTHEUS

Hercules is represented standing with his legs wide apart, his body thrown backward, in an attitude of great tension. He is holding in a firm grip Antaeus, whose strength was invincible as long as he remained in contact with the earth, and is lifting him up from the earth in order to dash him afterward powerless to the ground. Dark patina. Standing on an octagonal oblong base.

Height, 23½ inches.

The composition of this group is exactly the same as in the one in the Edward Simon Collection in Berlin, by Gian Bologna, representing the same subject and reproduced in Bode: "The Italian Bronze Statuettes of the Renaissance," Vol. III, Pl. 196.

AFTER ANTONIO RIZZO

435—BRONZE STATUETTE REPRESENTING EVE

Italian Late Sixteenth Century

Eve is represented nude, standing on a round base. Her right leg is advanced forward, and in her left upraised hand she is holding an apple. Her hair is parted in the middle and falls in loose curly strands over her back and shoulders. Part of it is twisted around her head.

Height, 17 inches.

Purchased from Charles of London.

This statuette is made after the famous statue by Antonio Rizzo, representing Eve, in the Palazzo Ducale in Venice. The arrangement of the hair and the pose are identical, and the only difference consists in the position of the hands, which are inverted. (See reproduction in Paoletti: "L'architettura e la scultura del Rinascimento in Venezia," and in Venturi: "Storia dell' Arte Italiana," Vol. VI, page 1067.)

475—A PAIR OF ANDIRONS REPRESENTING "WAR" AND "PEACE"
Venetian Early Seventeenth Century

First: The andiron representing War shows Mars, the God of War, in a richly ornate armor standing upon a support with crossed legs and holding with both hands a musket placed before him. The support is formed of three winged female caryatid figures and masks and on the tripod base are seen seated putti holding in their upraised hands lighted torches. They are seated on scrolls terminating in lions' bodies, and between them are seen grotesque masks, bearded, and surrounded with foliage.

Second: The andiron representing Peace shows the same base and pedestal as the preceding one. The statuette of Peace surmounts the whole and shows a draped female figure holding in her right hand an inverted torch while in her left was probably originally a cornucopia. Her head is slightly turned toward the left.

Height, 41 inches; width at base, 19½ inches.

The possible execution of these andirons by Titiano Aspetti is based on the fact that they show a close relationship with his works. The figures both of War and Peace are very similar to the ones representing Mars and Minerva in the Budapest Museum, reproduced in Leo Planiscig: "Die Venezianischen Bildhauer der Renaissance," page 566. Other works by Titiano Aspetti showing a relationship with the figures here reproduced are shown in the above-mentioned work.

THE SUPERB POPE SIXTUS IV COPE

502—GOLD NEEDLE-PAINTED BOUCLE DRAP D’OR RUBY VELVET COPE

Venetian Gothic

Orphreys very finely wrought in colored silks and gold threads; displaying crocketed Gothic canopies with slender columns, occupied by standing figures of Saints Peter, Francis, John, George, Nicholas and Martha. Beautiful original hood, executed in the manner of the orphreys with triple canopies and tesselated floor occupied by subject, “The Annunciation”; the Holy Spirit is seen at upper left, breathing the breath of life on the Virgin. At the foot of the hood is Sixtus’s coat-of-arms bearing a scroll-branched tree and mantled with his cardinal’s tasseled hat. Field of pellucid rose-ruby velvet of rare close texture and beautiful radiance; woven in fine threads of gold, bouclé at centers of floral motives, exhibiting conventionalized carnations, each within two delicately ciselé lobed devices and growing from exceptionally well-drawn supporting sprays of acanthus leaves occasionally bearing further flowers and clustered pomegranate motives.

Length, 3 yards 6 inches; depth, 1 2/3 yards.

Note: This marvelous cope is not only a tribute to the genius of the Venetian weaver, but to the great designer, probably Mantegna, and the embroiderer. It was originally worn by Pope Sixtus IV (1471-1484), who was a member of the noted Della Rovere family, which gave two popes and a dozen or more cardinals to the Church.

No. 552—PERSIAN TRICLINIUM SILK DAIS CARPET
GRAND TAPESTRIES

The following Series of Four Grand Tapestries illustrate the Triumphs of Scipio Africanus the Elder (237-183 B.C.), and concern his visit to the African Courts of the Numidian Princes Syphax and Masinissa. They all have their original beautiful borders; the crowning in each composed of two cupids supporting a cartouche bearing a Latin inscription denoting the episode depicted. The cupids also sustain very charming flanking garlands of fruit; these are continued at side, interrupted near the top by half-length cupids and toward foot by finely varied military trophies. The lower border is of leaf motives. Two of the series are signed with the Brussels city mark, namely, a red shield flanked by B's. One of these is signed by the weaver "G. V. D. Strcecken"—Gerard van den Stricken; the other by "H. Reydams—Henry Reydams." The condition of each is excellent, and the weaving of fine quality. They are executed with a wealth of color and a wide range of delicate and rich tones; displaying fine blues, yellows, golden-orange, tans, greens, pinks, ivories and grays, very charmingly accentuated by rare crimsons and occasionally by resonant black.

353—"SCIPIO AND MASINISSA BANQUETING"

In a hall of ample proportions a gay throng, seated at a rectangular table laden with viands and fruit, is feasting; in the background are numerous serving men and women. In the left foreground Scipio is seated in a curule chair at one end of the table, and wearing a laurel wreath; his back is turned to the spectator. Apparently the scene represents the rejoicings that resulted from Scipio's having secured the friendship of, among other Princes, Masinissa. In the right foreground are attendants and musicians near a candelabrum of ostentatious significance. Farther back, to the right, Masinissa, in armor, may be discerned at the festal board. In the center of the top border two cupids recline against a medallion which is inscribed: "Scipi et Masan Amicitiam ineunt et mensae accumbunt."

On each side of this pair of cupids is another putto, set among swags of fruit and foliage. In the upper portion of each side border is also seen a winged child, embowered amid flowers of gay hue. Farther down are the plumed helm and the armor, drum, standard and quiver—all borne upon a mass of flowers in full bloom.

Below, in the selvage, is the well-known factory mark of the Brussels tapestry works: two B's with a shield between, as well as the name H. Reydams, the famous tapestry designer and weaver.

About 13 feet 6 inches by 23 feet 10 inches.

(Illustrated)
From right to left across the foreground moves the triumphal procession, with warriors who wear laurel wreaths and swords. Many on the extreme right carry crowns in their hands. In the center lictors bear fasces. Those on the left bear offerings which they will make in the Temple toward which all hasten their steps. Outside of the Temple are seated old men and maidens; other figures are on the walls. In the background, and more to the right, an obelisk, an equestrian statue, a column and the buildings of ancient Rome—all rendered anachronistically in a composite landscape setting.

Inscribed in the border above: "Ad Capitolium progrediuntur ut Diis sacrificia sua offerant."

About 13 feet 6 inches by 23 feet 10 inches.
"SCIPIO GRANTS A TRUCE TO THE CARTHAGINIANS"

From the right side, men, women and children press toward the steps at the top of which Scipio is seated. Lictors with fasces are grouped round Scipio. In the foreground, amid luxuriant plants, is a youth with an amphora; near by, two dogs.
Inscribed above: "Ubi Schipion dat sponsan ad jungend."
In the selvedge is the Brussels factory mark; more to the right is the name G. V. D. STREECKEN, the well-known weaver.

About 13 feet 6 inches by 18 feet.
Roman Warriors, with others bearing fasces and military standards, march toward the left. In the right foreground is carried the dead Syphax, bearded and still crowned. In front of him is a prisoner whose hands are bound to the belt of a mounted soldier.

Inscribed above: “Siphax Mortuus portatur.”

About 13 feet 6 inches by 22 feet.

These four tapestries, possibly not a complete set originally, were acquired in two pairs from Benda, of Vienna, and Gottschalk, of Cologne. They were subsequently acquired from Duveen Brothers.

In addition to the Brussels tapestry mark, which became obligatory from 1528 onward, we find the name of Henri Reydams. He entered on his career in 1629, was privilégié of the city of Brussels on Feb. 16, 1640, and found in 1671 a successor in his son who had the same Christian name. Gerard van der Streek was an exact contemporary of H. Reydams the elder, and died in 1677. His daughter married Gerard Pemans. The history of Scipio was much favored as a subject for the weaver in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. It is found in records pertaining to Giulio Romano, Ponsen and other painter-designers.

"The Noonday Rest." A Flemish shepherd, wearing a feathered crimson cap and eating from a bowl, is seated in the foreground of a rocky, hilly and lightly wooded landscape, in which his sheep are scattered; beside him on the wayside are an earthenware pitcher and a large copper bowl. The coat of the shepherd, in exquisite turquoise-sapphire blue, gives a rare and beautiful note to the quiet pastel shades in which the landscape is woven. Finished with yellow band edged with blue.

Height, 44½ inches; width, 17 inches.

Note: The Cartoon for this interesting tapestry was executed by Teniers the Younger (1610-1690).
"Boors Dancing." An elderly peasant in holiday garb is dancing with his wife in the foreground to the tune of a piper at right who wears a rich blue coat. Beyond, about center, is a stream bordered by cottages and a farm-house. Woven in pastel colors with the costumes in lovely crimsons, yellows and blues. Finished with a red and golden-yellow border displaying staves with scrolled leaves thereon interrupted by leaf-cartouche corners.

Height, 34 1/2 inches; width, 26 inches.

Note: The Cartoon for this interesting tapestry was executed by Teniers the Younger (1610-1690).
559—BRUSSELS TAPESTRY

After Teniers; Flemish Late Seventeenth Century

"Boys Playing Peg Top." A group of six boys in various attitudes are before a ring set on the ground of a village green; cottages and trees are irregularly placed in the background. A boy at right is about to spin his top into the ring where three other tops are already. The scene is full of keen sportsmanship and the abandon of youth. The pastel-colored background is delightfully relieved by the charming blues, rich crimson and mulberry of the boys' costumes. Finished with hands of yellow and blue.

Height, 35 inches; length, 52 inches.

_Note:_ The Cartoon for this animated and interesting tapestry was executed by Teniers the Younger (1610—1690).
"Boys Playing Hop Scotch." Seven little lads, animated with their rough game or resting from their strenuous sport, are scattered over a roadway at the entrance to a village, which is seen at left; beyond is low wooded country. Woven in extremely rich crimsons, blues of very rare quality, rose-du-Barry pinks, greens and a wide range of pink-tans and ivory with golden-yellow pervading the whole scene with a sunlight glow. Finished with light blue and yellow bandings.

Note: The Cartoon for this admirable, animated and beautifully toned tapestry was executed by Teniers the Younger (1610-1690).
561—BRUSSELS TAPESTRY

After Teniers; Flemish Late Seventeenth Century

"The Itinerant Vendor." A somewhat grizzled clean-shaven man, wearing a yellow coat and shorts, with bluish-gray and lavender stockings and lavender plum coat, stands in the foreground offering his wares from a pot held in his left hand; a clump of trees rising at extreme left canopies the scene far up into the heavens. A village church is at distant right. Woven in rich mellow greens, grays, blues, ivories, the trees flecked by autumn tints, and rich golden-yellows. Finished with band of old-yellow edged with blue.

Height, 9 feet 3 inches; width, 2 feet 3\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches.

Note: The Cartoon for this decorative tapestry was executed by Teniers the Younger (1610-1690).

562—BRUSSELS TAPESTRY

After Teniers; Flemish Late Seventeenth Century

"Barnyard with Personages." An elderly bearded peasant, attired in blue doublet, yellow apron and blue stockings, is seated on a stool before the gable of a thatched farmhouse; he offers an apple to his little granddaughter, who stands expectantly before him; she wears an ivory blouse, blue apron and yellow skirt down to her tiny toes. At a portaled gate at right, her mother, wearing a blue skirt pinned up at back showing a crimson underskirt, is in conversation with a neighbor in pink bodice, holding a baby in her arms. Woven in varied tones of blues, yellows, tans and warm pinks, making an excellent foil for the costumes. Finished with old-yellow banding touched with a blue edging.

Height, 9 feet; width, 2 feet.

Note: The Cartoon for this fine pastoral tapestry was executed by Teniers the Younger (1610-1690).

563—BRUSSELS TAPESTRY

After Teniers; Flemish Late Seventeenth Century

"Going to Market." A peasant woman with a basket over her arm and carrying a long rustic staff is trudging along a roughish road crossing the foreground toward right; a boor, at her side, carrying a similar staff, points ahead and is in eager conversation with her. Rough ground with two large trees at left, rising far into the blue sky. A stream crosses about mid-distance; a château and lightly wooded hills rise on the stream's far bank. Woven in cool greens, blues and glowing golden yellows with blues, old reds, pinks and deep mulberry giving richness to the scene. Finished with a frame border of old-red and golden-yellow developing moldings of ovolo motives and varied scrolling leaves interrupted at corners by arabesque scrolled rosettes.

Height, 12 feet 3 inches; width, 4 feet 10 inches.

Note: The Cartoon for this pastoral tapestry was executed by Teniers the Younger (1610-1690).

No. 762—CARVED AND GILDED VELVET BROCADED CANOPIED BED (Louis XVI Period)
IMPORTANT EMBROIDERED, CANOPIED CARVED LACQUE BED
Louis XV Period

Consisting of finely embroidered rose-du Barry silk lambrequin and large back hanging draped as curtains from canopied cornice, silk panel in back of bed, bolster, large coverlet, bed with gray lacquè scroll-paneled headboard, box spring and mattress. The superb embroidery, executed on heavy gros-grain silk, was designed in Paris and sent to China to be worked in silks which give a most pleasing and harmonious ensemble. The lambrequin displays graceful floral arabesques, finished with latticed and bowknotted festoons. The back hanging and looped side curtains are draped in one piece and, like so much of the fine Chinese embroidery, the pattern is rendered perfectly on both sides of the silk; it is enriched with a jardinière of fine fruit surrounded by sprays of further fruit, flowers, flying and perched birds of gay plumage and scrolled basket panels toward outer edges. The back panel of bed and bolster adorned with arabesque scrollings, basket of flowers and facing birds. The coverlet develops a four-lobed medallion of very beautiful flowers and fruit enclosing lighter scrollings, birds, stellate devices; the field is scrolled with large flowers and fruit from the outer corners of the borders, and birds are seen pecking at the fruit, irregularly scrolled borders developing arcades about centers sheltering low baskets of flowers and scrollings of husks and buds. The bed with frontal cabriole legs, and enriched rails and canopy apparently of a later period.

Total height, 11 feet 7 inches; height of bed, 4 feet 6 inches; width, 5 feet 4 inches; length, 7 feet 8 inches.

CONDITIONS OF SALE

1. Rejection of bids: Any bid which is not consonant with the values of the articles offered at which no nominal or fractional advance may be rejected by the auctioneer in his judgment such bid would be likely to affect the sale injuriously.

2. The buyer: The highest bidder shall be the buyer, and if any dispute arises between two or more bidders, the auctioneer shall determine either the same or put up for re-sale the lot as in dispute.

3. Identification and port payment by buyer: The name of the buyer of each lot shall be given immediately after the sale thereof, and in every case, each buyer shall sign a card giving the lot number, amount for which sold, and his or her name and address.

Payment at the actual time of the sale shall be made of all or each part of the purchase prices as may be required.

All foregoing conditions are not complied with, the lot or lots so purchased may at the option of the auctioneer be put up again and re-sold.

4. Notice of imperfections: A notice of imperfections will be given upon the fall of the auctioneer's hammer, and thereafter neither the consignor nor the Association is responsible for the buyer's or purchaser's knowledge of any imperfection.

5. Delivery of purchases: Delivery of any purchaser will be made only upon payment of the total amount due for all purchases of the sale.

Deliveries will be made at the place of sale or at the storage warehouse to which purchases may have been removed.

Deliveries at the American Art Galleries are to be made only between the hours of 10 A.M. and 4 P.M. on sales days and on other days except holidays, when no delivery will be made between the hours of 9 A.M. and 5 P.M.

Deliveries at places of sale other than the American Art Galleries will be made only during the forenoon following the day of sale unless by special notice or arrangement between the parties.

Deliveries at the storage warehouse to which goods may have been sent will be made on any day other than holidays between the hours of 9 and 11.

Deliveries of any purchases of small articles likely to be lost or mislaid may be made at the discretion of the auctioneer during the season of the sale at which they were sold.

6. Storage in default of prompt payment and calling for goods: Articles not paid for in full and either not called for by the purchaser or delivered upon his or her order by noon of the day following that of the sale will be turned over to the Association to some carrier to be carried and stored in some warehouse until the time of the delivery thereon to the purchaser, and the cost of such carriage and storage will be charged against the purchaser and the risk of loss or damage occasioned by such removal or storage will be upon the purchaser.

NOTE: The Limited space of the Delivery Rooms of the Association makes the above arrangement necessary, and it is not done for the benefit of the Association, but also for that of its patrons, whose goods therefore would have to be so crowded as to be subject to damage and loss.

7. Shipping: Shipping, boxing or wrapping of purchases is a business in which the Association is in no wise engaged, and will not be performed by the Association concerned.

The Association will, however, afford to purchasers every facility for employing at current and reasonable rates carriers and packers, defraying, as however, without any assumption of responsibility on its part for the acts and charges of the parties engaged for such service.

8. Guarantee: The Association exercises great care to catalogue every lot correctly and carefully therein, and also at the actual time of sale to point out any defect or imperfection, but guarantees in no manner or way either by the member or the Association against the correctness of the description, completeness, authenticity or condition of any lot and no sale will be set aside on account of any incorrectness of catalog description, or for any damage suffered by the buyer.
The Association is under no obligation to ensure the buyer against any loss or damage occasioned by the buyer's own negligence.

9. Buying on order: Buying or bidding for the Association by responsible parties, unless specifically transmitted to us by mail, telegraph or telephone will be faithfully attempted to without charge or remuneration.

Any purchase so made will be subject to the further conditions of sale, and the Association will, for the benefit of a purchaser of a lot of one or more books by or for a purchaser who has not through himself or his agent procured the exhibition or sale, the Association will permit such lot to be removed within ten days from the date of sale and the purchase money will be refunded if the lot is not withdrawn from its catalogue description.

Orders for execution by the Association should be written and given with such substance as to leave no room for misunderstanding.

Not only should the lot number be given, but also the title, and books should be specified as much as the lot, and when the lot consists of one or more volumes of books or objects of art, the kind per volume or piece should also be stated. If the one transmitting the order is unknown to the Association, a deposit should be sent or reference submitted. Shipping directions should also be given.

10. Printed Catalogues: Printed copies of the catalogue or any section thereof, will be furnished by the Association at charges commensurate with the duties involved in copying the necessary information from the records of the Association.
